Election petitions delivered

Wolf gives Jenner 4,400 signatures

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

BELLEVILLE — After giving her a pile of petitions that could change how the Belleville Area College Board is elected, Rep. Sam Wolf shook hands with Board President Elizabeth Jenner on Wednesday.

Jenner took the petitions containing more than 4,400 signatures and commended Wolf, Granite City. He successfully sponsored the law and petition drive allowing voters to decide Nov. 8 if they want the election change.

"There is a strong feeling throughout the district that the BAC board should consist of a broader representation to reflect the views of all the district rather than just those of individuals concentrated in a small area," Wolf said.

The board unanimously voted to put the election referendum on the ballot in the eight-county district.

Board members are chosen at-large, a system critics condemn as resulting in a Belleville-area board. The seven board members are from in and around Belleville.

In November, voters will decide whether seven subdistricts should be created for the district. If the referendum is approved, one board member will be elected from each subdistrict, eliminating the possibility of an all-Belleville board.

With Wolf were Leo Konzen, a Granite City attorney and former BAC board member; Frank Boyne, St. Clair County Board member; and Paul Hofmeister, a Waterloo resident.

Boyne said all district taxpayers should have a say in the board's actions.

"People in Granite City and Red Bud don't think they're being properly represented," Boyne said. "Trusting Dan Wolford said he would back the change if those wanting subdistricts are not 'politically motivated.'"

"As a trustee, I have heard several reasons advanced as to the reason for this... that it was started by a disgruntled candidate, or that it was politically motivated," Wolford said. "If any of these reasons were true, I hope the general public would stand against it."

"I hope it's for the best interest of the students only, and that's the only reason they did it. Other than that I would be very much against it."

Wolf assured Wolford the reason for wanting the change is "strictly to better serve the students in the community college district."

If approved in November, the first subdistrict elections will be in November 1989, beginning a transition period resulting in at-large members being phased out.

Gaffner nudging Costello

By Edward T. Hearn
P-RJ Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Republican House candidate Robert Gaffner said Tuesday private poll results show him running even with his Democratic opponent.

Gaffner called it a surprise outcome that he hopes will boost fund-raising and propel him to an election triumph.

"It shows us virtually dead even at this point. I don't mean to suggest we should be overconfident or anything, but I am very comfortable about this election," Gaffner said in an interview between stops on his three-day visit to Washington.

Gaffner said he raised about $50,000 from political action committees during his unsuccessful House race in 1986 and that he will need their help again this year.

Gaffner campaign manager Bill Kearney said the new polling data should help woo PAC contributors.

"When PAC representatives see this data, they are going to seriously reconsider this race," Kearney said. "This race is a toss-up."

Dave Wagner, campaign manager for Gaffner's opponent, Democrat Jerry Costello, dismissed Gaffner's view of the polling results and said his candidate came out ahead in a Republican-sponsored poll.

"We are comfortable with our position in the polls right now," Wagner said. "The poll that does count is the poll of voters on Election Day."

Gaffner released the polling results a day after meeting with President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush, who promised to help him defeat Costello in the Aug. 9 special election for an unexpired term and later in the Nov. 8 general election for a two-year term.

The special election became necessary when veteran Rep. Mel Price died in April. Gaffner is running unopposed in the July 12 special primary.

Costello has a special primary. Ellis is his special primary.

Horseshoe Lake water in wrong place, wrong time

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The water level at Horseshoe Lake is wrong.

"It's too low," Bill Worthen, owner of the Horseshoe Lake

Marina, said. "With the rain we were getting I was starting to feel pretty good and then it went down again."

"It's high. Even though the river level is low, Horseshoe is a foot and a half above the spillway," Bill Nichols, owner of a large amount of the lake, said.

"The MESD (Metro East Sanitary District) did have two culverts open, but now one's closed."

"They're a drainage agency; we're paying them to drain, and they're holding back water."

Both Worthen and Nichols said they have markers set up and keep close track of the water level.

"I can't very well make it high and low at the same time," Shang Greathouse, MESD chairman, said. "I operate there for one reason — to keep Nameoki Township from flooding. We try to hold it in when the canal gets high and only let out when the Principal says Venice pupils reading better

By Paul Guggina
Staff writer

VENICE — Grade school pupils are improving their reading skills, principal Seth Kirkpatrick said last week.

In a report to the Board of Education, Kirkpatrick said 20 children are at reading levels at least two years above their actual grade level.

"It may not sound like much, but this shows you we are making gains," Kirkpatrick said.

A reading program that awarded pupils free pizza if they read a certain number of books is encouraging the children to read more, Kirkpatrick said.

One sixth-grade pupil, Tiffany Taylor, read 120 books, he said.

"Once the kids got started on that, you couldn't stop them," Kirkpatrick said. "Everybody wanted to read everything they could get their hands on."

The principal's report also showed that, of the school's 322 pupils, 25 — or 7.7 percent — were not promoted to the next grade. Although this is better than last year, when 8.3 percent of the pupils were retained, Kirk-patrik said the school still needs to improve.

"That's one area that needs work, and I've asked the teachers to improve upon that," he said. "We've got to have a little help from home, too. We can't do it all here."

Most of the retentions were among eighth grade pupils. Eleven eighth-graders, or 27 percent, were not promoted to the ninth grade.

The average retention rate of Illinois grade schools was 2.7 percent in 1987.

Enrollment projections for next year show class sizes will range from 17 to 35 pupils.

Illinois Power warns of financial disaster

DECATUR — If a proposal by the staff of the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) to reduce Illinois Power's electric rates 9.1 percent were accepted, it would "result in financial disaster for the company and seriously impair the utility's ability to provide reliable service to its 600,000 customers."

Implementation of the "staff's proposal would result in a disastrous financial situation for the company," Larry D. Haab, Illinois Power's executive vice president and chief financial officer, said Monday in written testimony filed with the ICC.

Haab's testimony was filed as part of Illinois Power's rebuttal case in support of the company's rate moderation plan involving the Clinton Power Station.

At the end of an 11-year phase-in period, the rate increase would total about $265 million.

The rebuttal case now being presented by IP explains in detail what the financial consequences would be in the event the commission were to accept its staff's recommendations.

The rebuttal case will also respond to a wide range of other issues raised by the ICC staff and other intervenors — including the need for Clinton, a nuclear power plant.

If the ICC staff's proposal to reduce rates were accepted, Haab said, Illinois Power's financial health would be weakened to the point that the company would be severely restricted from financial markets and therefore unable to raise the necessary funds to conduct the utility's operations.

Higher bus fares July 1

By Roger McGrath
Staff affiliate

Bi-State bus fares will increase July 1, and commissioners on Friday promised service will be maintained at its current level at least through October.

"If you say you need this fare increase to maintain service then, by God, you maintain the service," said commissioner Jill Roach, the driving force behind the pledge to keep Bi-State's service at its current level.

Eight other commissioners concurred, approving the higher fares by a vote of 9 to 1. The Bi-State Development Agency operates the region's public bus system.

Illinois commissioner Roy

May opposed the increase, which will boost local fares by 10 cents to 85 cents in Missouri and to 80 cents in Illinois. Transit districts in Madison and St. Clair counties in Illinois subsidize riders' fares there.

Express fares will go up by 15 cents to $1.15 in Missouri and by 25 cents to $1.25 in Illinois. The prices of transfers, passes and call-a-ride trips also will increase.

Bi-State officials have said the $2.5 million in revenue the fare increases will raise is needed to balance the agency's fiscal 1989 budget of $94.3 million. The year begins July 1.

"There are no concrete reasons why the fare increase is

Aldermen add bite to leash law

MADISON — Dog owners, take notice. Spot and Fido, watch out. Madison is going to crack down on running dogs.

Two members of the Madison City Council said Tuesday that a city ordinance requiring dogs to be kept on a leash when in public will be strictly enforced.

Fourth Ward Alderman

Charles Rockett and 2nd Ward Alderman Ron Grzywacz said the city's "leash law" will be enforced with no exceptions.

"There will be no leniency," Rockett said.

Grzywacz said, "Too many people are letting their dogs run loose. And many new residents 'probably are not aware that we have a leash law.'"

The ordinance calls for a $25 fine for the first offence and a $50 fine for a second.

Quad City Simon out, mends fences

WASHINGTON In formally bowing out of the presidential contest June 6, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon stepped aside by praising the successful nomination drive of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and by mending relations with the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

"The primaries and caucuses are now history. The verdict is in. I will vote for Michael Dukakis."

FEET FIRST

A CUSHY EXISTENCE

By Dr. Claude Hiles

Diabetics know that they must take extremely good care of their feet. The sad fact is that anywhere from five to fifteen percent of all diabetics will have to undergo leg amputation at some point in their lives. The problem lies with poor circulation and loss of feeling. Infections often arise from calluses at the bottom of the foot that become ulcerated and infected. However, a new study shows that diabetics who wear running shoes are less apt to develop calluses than patients who wear regular shoes.

As a diabetic, there are several preventive measures you can take in the care of your feet. Inspect them each evening for any potential signs of a foot problem, use warm water to bathe them, and keep your diabetes under control. Above all, be certain to have small problems examined and treated before they become large ones. Contact my office, located at 1830 State St., for specialized attention to your foot concerns. Diabetic foot care is available and in-house surgery is performed. Office hours by appointment. John Hancock, M.D., Medicare and most insurances accepted.

his at the convention and do everything I can to advance his candidacy after the convention," Simon said at a press conference at the Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Simon at one time represented the Granite City area in the state Legislature.

The Illinois Democrat virtually excluded himself from accept in the vice presidential nomination, but urged Dukakis to consider Jackson, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio for the second position.

"Conventional wisdom is that a vice presidential candidate helps you in one state. That's the state of the vice presidential campaign. Obviously, Lloyd Bentsen and John Glenn would have to be very high on the list," Simon said. "I will support whatever choice Mike Dukakis makes."

One of eight Democrats who sought the presidential nomination, Simon won the March 15 Illinois primary but suspended his campaign April 9 after finishing fourth in the caucus.

At the time, Jackson campaign officials blasted Simon's decision not to withdraw from the race. They said that under state party rules, Jackson stood to gain about 60 at-large Illinois delegates to the Atlanta convention. Jackson finished second to Simon in the Illinois balloting.

Simon, who called Jackson before making his June 8 announcement, dismissed questions of a rift with the Jackson camp over his decision to stay in the race until after the primaries had ended.

"I don't think you will find Jesse Jackson among my critics on that," Simon said. "There are some, particularly in Illinois, who have been my delegates who will be voting for Jesse Jackson if Jesse puts his name in for nomination."

Simon gave the same answer Wednesday as he did in April when asked why he didn't get out completely. With Dukakis, Jackson and Sen. Albert Gore, Dukakis, locked in a close battle, Simon said his delegate totals gave him bargaining power in a brokered convention.

"At the time I suspended my candidacy, it looked like a very real possibility that we were going to have a brokered convention and I wanted to have a voice in where we were going," Simon said.

When Simon suspended his race, Dukakis had 740 delegates, Jackson 704 delegates and Gore 394. Simon left the race with about 150 to 175 delegates.

Simon bowed out a day after the front-running Dukakis breezed to victory in the California, New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico primaries, his last stops on the primary trail before the July 18 convention starting date.

Asked why Dukakis emerged from the pack, Simon put it this way:

"One of the greatest assets Michael Dukakis has, probably his greatest asset in terms of his candidacy, is that he was himself. He didn't try to become something else. He is genuine. He is not phony. I think that came across."

The last-day sweep gave Dukakis 2,264 convention delegates, about 200 votes above the total necessary to earn the nomination. Jackson trails with 1,122 delegates.

Democratic voters in primaries and caucuses have made clear their decision to nominate Michael Dukakis, who through the course of this campaign has demonstrated his leadership skills, his substance, and his commitment to progress for all Americans," Simon said.

In his statement, Simon also praised Jackson's effort to win the party nomination.

"Jesse Jackson has contributed immensely to our party by making us more sensitive to the needs of the less fortunate," Simon said. "Millions of Americans have responded to his message of hope." Simon said he would not consider the vice presidential slot because he preferred to stay in the Senate and assist in forming national policy from there.

"The vice presidency tends to be a ceremonial office, cutting ribbons, attending state funerals, that sort of thing," Simon said. Simon said his first presidential bid was likely his last.

Reagan backs Gaffner

WASHINGTON—President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush met separately Monday with Republican candidate Robert Gaffner, and promised White House backing in his congressional race against Democrat Jerry Costello.

"We have their fullest support—the White House, the president and the vice president—for both elections, Aug. 9 and Nov. 3," said Gaffner, who met afterward with a group of reporters outside the White House West Wing.

The unexpired term of the late Rep. Melvin Price will be filled in August, and a two-year term will be decided in November.

The meeting was part of the White House effort to promote Gaffner and five other Republicans vying for U.S. House seats. The White House staff also took photographs and video pictures to send back to home newspapers and television stations, Gaffner said.

Gaffner said Bush told him during their 10-minute session that he would campaign for the candidate in the 21st District if he found time during his presidential campaign.

Granite City boy with AIDS on TV

GRANITE CITY—Millions of Americans will glimpse Granite City in a national television broadcast this fall, but the image that flickers before them may be one of ignorance and hostility.

The city's reaction to a young AIDS victim's return to school will be featured in an hour-long CBS documentary scheduled to air the week of Oct. 9.

The documentary will show how people with AIDS have been dealt with in various American communities. Its focus will be the ongoing creation of the "AIDS quilt," a national tribute to AIDS victims. AIDS is acquired-immune deficiency syndrome.

"We're using the quilt as a barometer of how the country has dealt with the AIDS epidemic in different ways," said Peter Lengsfelder, associate producer of the documentary, in a telephone interview from Los Angeles on Monday.

One segment of the show will be devoted to Jason Robertson of Granite City, Lengsfelder said.

Peeping Tom case held

GRANITE CITY—The city's alleged Peeping Tom patrolman's case before the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners never got started Monday night.

A continuance was granted about 45 minutes before the scheduled 7 p.m. starting time. Board President Leland Ambuehl said as he turned potential observers away at the City Hall steps.

Patrolman Scott Jenkins is accused of violation of departmental rules as a result of an alleged Peeping Tom incident while he was on duty May 15. Jenkins also faces a criminal charge of official misconduct as a result of the alleged incident.

Investment offer nixed

GRANITE CITY—Listing his subject as the desire to give the city $50,000, Kevin Hartsock addressed the City Council on Tuesday.

Hartsock is an inventor and in return for a $4,900 loan from the city, promised to give the city $50,000 in three months and in percent of all profits thereafter.

Hartsock said he would reveal the specifics of his invention if the council members would agree to sign a statement of secrecy.

He did say his invention was something every traveler and truck driver would want.

The City Council declined.

Telethon nets hospitals $670,000; Granite Citians help in campaign

By Scott Cousins
Staff affiliate

When the patients, doctors and nurses of St. Louis Children's Hospital and Cardinal Glennon Hospital patients get around to writing thank-you notes to sponsors of the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, corporate sponsors will be receiving most of those letters.

According to Julie Gerbsch, executive director of the Children's Miracle Network Telethon in St. Louis, more than $670,000 was raised locally during the telethon, which appeared Friday and Saturday, June 4-5, on KPLR-TV, Channel 11.

Nationally, the telethon raised $59 million, making it one of the largest in the nation.

The biggest corporate sponsor of the telethon was Wal-Mart. Locally, 41 stores raised $170,000.

Throughout the country, local Wal-Marts raised about $1.5 million. That was matched by a $1 million grant from the Wal-Mart Foundation, which oversees charitable donations for the corporation.

Gerbsch said most of the money, about 85 percent, was raised by the corporate sponsors before the telethon began.

In Collinsville, Wal-Mart manager Dennis Tidwell said his store raised $2,400 by holding bake sales and raffles.

Other Wal-Marts raising money for the telethon were: Wood River, $2,100; Belleville, $2,400; Granite City, $2,000; Waterloo, $2,100; Highland, $1,500; Cahokia, $3,000; and Sam's Wholesale Outlet in Fairview Heights, $4,400.

The other top corporate sponsor in this area was Schnucks, which raised $115,000.

Gerbsch said the money raised locally will be split evenly between St. Louis Children's Hospital and Cardinal Glennon Hospital.

The money can be used for patient care, research and equipment as the hospitals see fit.

"People like this charity because the children's hospitals treat all the problems of children, whether it's an accident or cancer," she said.

"People also like the fact that they can give their money and it is used locally to help their children and their neighbor's children," she added.

The telethon has been in existence since 1980 and was seen in this area from 1982-1983. The local hospitals dropped out after the 1983 telethon, but rejoined for the 1988 telethon after hiring Gerbsch as director.

Gerbsch said the hospitals decided not to participate in 1986 and 1987 because the telethon was too time-consuming and not enough money was raised.

Now, Gerbsch, technically an employee of both hospitals, runs the local program, which she said is doing very well.

Doesn't miss a day in 40 years

By Rev. J. Michael Smith
Pastor, Trinity Methodist

There's a Sunday school lesson in this story.

Bill E. Jones has earned his 40-year attendance pen from the Sunday school at Trinity United Methodist Church. That's 40 years of impeccable accountability to his Sunday school. That's 2,080 Sundays!

When Bill Jones first began working on his attendance record, it would be another two years before his church building would be finished. It would be another seven years before his present pastor would be born. Harry Truman was president of the United States.

His record is particularly impressive when one considers the personal hardships that Bill Jones has had to overcome. Since his birth, Bill has suffered from cerebral palsy. Cerebral palsy is often caused by an injury to the brain during birth, and the symptoms include involuntary motions and difficulties in controlling voluntary motions. It often results in speech difficulties.

But one never hears an excuse from Bill. Good church members have a host of excuses for not attending Sunday school. But not Bill.

Bill, 54, lives with his parents, Paul and Lois Jones. He gives his parents much credit for seeing that he had transportation to and from church.

Lois said, "We make every effort to see that he gets to Sunday school, but it's his idea."

Bill is a member of the Fel-

Bill Jones gets 40-year pin from Mary Lee Herma lowship Sunday School class, taught by Bill Metcalf. He was given his 40-year pin by Mary Lee Herma, chairperson of education at Trinity Church.

The attendance record, which began in 1948, was accomplished at several different churches. While Bill was attending McKendree College, from which he graduated, he attended church there and had his records forwarded to Trinity Church.

As his pastor, it has been rewarding to have Bill as a member of my congregation.

His faith has given him strength for his many hardships. And his faith has also permitted him to treat the rest of us with gentleness and grace.

Not all of us will achieve a 40-year perfect attendance pen. But we can emulate him in another way. Like him, we can permit ourselves to be shaped and molded and strengthened by the good opportunities God does give us.

Bill, congratulations. And thank-you for witnessing to me both by your attendance and by your grace.

Skin cancer screenings Saturday

A free screening clinic for skin cancer will be held here Saturday, June 18.

There were more than 500,000 cases of skin cancer last year in the United States; of this number, 7,800 resulted in death, and the majority of these cases were attributed to overexposure to the sun.

The clinic will be held at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, 2100 Madison Ave., from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in Pascal Hall, sponsored by the SEMC Cancer Program and doctors from the SEMC staff.

A spokesman said, "Early detection is the key to survival."

"Some of the early warning signals include: any unusual skin condition, especially a change in the size or color of a mole or other darkly pigmented growth or spot, scabiness, oozing, bleeding, the appearance of a bump or nodule, a change in sensation, itchiness, tenderness or pain. These are all warning signs."

"Patients will be examined individually in the Industrial Medicine Clinic by SEMC physicians who will be looking for any of the above warning signs.

"People are encouraged to wear loose-fitting clothes."

"Educational material will be available, including pamphlets and a videotape feature."

Free parking will be available in the covered garage on 21st Street.

Appointments are recommended, but not required. For more information or to make an appointment, persons may call the SEMC Public Relations Department at 798-3167.

WASHINGTON — In formally bowing out of the presidential contest June 8, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon stepped aside by praising the successful nomination drive of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and by mending relations with the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

FEET FIRST

A CUSHY EXISTENCE

By Dr. Claude Hiles

Diabetics know that they must take extremely good care of their feet. The sad fact is that anywhere from five to fifteen percent of all diabetics will have to undergo leg amputation at some point in their lives. The problem lies with poor circulation and loss of feeling. Infections often arise from calluses at the bottom of the foot that become ulcerated and infected. However, a new study shows that diabetics who wear running shoes are less apt to develop calluses than patients who wear regular shoes.

As a diabetic, there are several preventive measures you can take in the care of your feet. Inspect them each evening for any potential signs of a foot problem, use warm water to bathe them, and keep your diabetes under control. Above all, be certain to have small problems examined and treated before they become large ones. Contact my office, located at 1930 State St., for specialized attention to your foot concerns. Diabetic foot care is available and in-home surgery is performed. Office hours by appointment. John Hancock, BC/BS, Medicare and most insurances accepted.

Interim chancellor wants tax increase

Education cannot afford to go without the governor's proposed income tax increase, said Belleville Area College Interim Chancellor B.J. Davis.

"Shrinking state aid has been a key factor in our college's leaving full-time faculty positions open, restricting faculty travel, delaying major building maintenance and purchasing instructional equipment," he said.

"We strongly support Governor (James) Thompson's proposal for an increase in state income taxes that would aid education. It is an investment in the economic future of our state."

Davis has made several appearances individually, and with other area educators, to seek support for the tax increase.

This position reflects the action taken by the BAC Board of Trustees in March when it approved a resolution calling for the state to raise more money for community college education.

"This year BAC out budgeted expenses by $1.9 million to ensure that the current year's income matched expenses. College officials have warned they are ending this year with a balanced budget only by delaying needed expenses."

BAC's tuition level has been frozen at $28 per semester hour by trustees as a dual effort to encourage enrollment and not place any additional financial burden on the students. The local real estate tax rate also remains constant.

A major difference in the college income picture has been the reductions in state funding.

BAC's state aid was cut more than $400,000 last year and another $300,000 this year. State-wide community college education has been cut more than $12.7 million in the last two years.

"The state provides 44 percent of our income. If such cuts continue the quality of our academic programs could be jeopardized," Davis said.

Thirteen full-time faculty positions have not been filled and 18 new faculty and staff positions were turned down for the new budget year that begins July 1, he added.

All BAC staff members have had salaries frozen four of the past five years.

Davis said education is critical to keeping jobs, attracting economic development and enhancing the quality of life.

In the last eight years the state's general revenue fund support for higher education declined 18 percent when adjusted for inflation.

During nearly the same time frame Illinois lost more jobs than any of the other top 10 industrial states.

"The community college system is unique in its accountability to local residents."

"Community colleges are the very best values for the taxpayers. We provide the first, best, and years of traditional four-year degree programs with highly trained, experienced and caring faculty."

"We offer about 80 occupational programs providing training and re-training at a fraction of the cost of private institutions."

"We believe maintaining community college quality is crucial to the state of Illinois."

The joy of lex

As one who makes his living, such as it is, with words, I know from sometimes painful experience how difficult it can be to say or write exactly what one means. My co-workers are still tormenting me for a moment of pronoun-confusion which led me inadvertently to imply that one man was living with another's wife.

Most of us miss the mark about half the time without even realizing it. But the results of our misbegotten efforts can be amusing, and that's our topic this week — fun with words, the joy of lex, or "My Tongue Got In Front of My Eyetooth So I Couldn't See What I Was Saying."

As lifestyle editor of this journal, I am responsible each week for editing scores of press releases and various social-news items. Thus I sometimes get to read sentences like the following:

"The bride wore a long white lace dress which fell to the floor." That wedding might have made front page, with a picture.

And this: "(So-and-so) makes mashed potatoes as flutty and delicious as any of my acquaintances." Are there cannibals among us?

I call such offenses to sense "mangling modifiers."

Even professional wordsmiths are guilty of misarranges of meaning. Witness this headline from a Vermont newspaper: "Dr. Ruth Talks About Sex With Newspaper Editors." Yuck.

Or this one from a Canadian paper: "Sexual Misconduct Alleged at City Hall." Double-yuck.

Here's an explanatory blurb whose meaning is wonderfully murky: "The summary of information contained in the number of students broken down by sex, marital status and age." Poor devils.

And this from an etiquette columnist: "A gentleman never crumbles his bread or rolls in his soup." Perhaps rolling in cracker crumbs is OK?

Who could deny the wisdom in this advice? "Wash your face in the morning and neck at night. But if you absolutely must neck in the morning, be sure to wash your face first."

Some phrases are ludicrous in certain contexts. Years ago, I saw a police story about the recovery of a corpse from New York City's East River. The man had been shot and stabbed several times and his body wrapped in chains. At the end of the story, the writer dutifully added this stunning revelation: "Police suspect foul play."

Can't sneak anything by those coppers, can you?

That one was so memorable, I suspect the writer intended mischief. Which reminds me of this malaprop: An editor, upon being informed that a staff cut back was imminent, exclaimed, "But my goodness, we're already underhanded!"

Malapropes derive their name from Mrs. Malaprop, a character in a play by 18th-century British dramatist Richard Brinsley Sheridan. In "The Rivals," Mrs. Malaprop uttered these words of advice: "Illiterate him, I say, quite from your memory."

As Art Linkletter knew well, kids often say the funniest things. But often their daffynities come closer to the truth than what they were actually trying to say:

"When a man has more than one wife, he's a pigamist."

"Socrates died from an overdose of wedlock."

And, memorably, "In 'A Streetcar Named Desire' the climax is when Blanche goes to bed with Stella's husband."

Then there are spoonerisms, the accidental transposition of sounds, usually the initial sounds, of two or more words: for example, blushing crow instead of crushing blow. They are named for the legendary Rev. William A. Spooner, dean of New College, Oxford, around the turn of the century who created the original spoonerism in chapel by announcing the next hymn would be "Kingdome Kings Their Titles Take."

Spooner allegedly upbraided a student for "hissing mystery lectures" and another for "fighting a liar in the quadrangle."

It is said he committed spoonerisms of dead as well as of the word. After turning on a light to escort a friend down a dark stairway he then turned off the light and escorted him down the dark.

The English used to toast the "dear old Queen." I propose a toast to the queer old dean.

Last bell for two teachers

After 89 years in school, yeah, they deserve a break

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

MADISON — They entered the teaching profession in an era when teaching was one of the few professions open to women.

Today, the doors to most professions are open to women.

But Martha Hayes and Valerie Stevens, who between them have 89 years of experience as teachers, 79 of them in the Madison district both say they would become teachers again.

The two were honored with a retirement luncheon by Madison School District 12. Hayes taught for 46 years (44 in Madison) and Stevens for 43 years (35 in Madison).

"I was satisfied to teach,"

"I loved it. If I hadn't, I wouldn't have done it for 46 years."

said Hayes, who taught academic subjects in the grade schools.

"I loved it. If I hadn't, I wouldn't have done it for 46 years,"

Stevens, who as a teacher of vocal music taught generations of students, of the great rewards of her chosen field. "To see kids get up in front of an audience and perform — I just loved knowing that that (confidence) would stay with them the rest of their lives."

Despite years of putting up with the semi-wild beasts children can sometimes be, Hayes and Stevens don't pretend to be saints.

"Also, it was for the money," Hayes said, laughing.

Hayes got more than money and satisfaction. She got her husband, Jimmy Hayes. Her intermediate grade pupils at Louis Baer School "played Cupid," she said, introducing her to her future husband, a truncky and first-aid officer who retired five years ago.

"I thought he was a book salesman at first," Hayes said, "and I didn't want to buy any books!"

The two have seen a lot of changes in their years of service — some for the better, others for the worse. One of the changes had a direct impact on Hayes.

Forty-some years ago, teachers were not allowed to smoke, to go places where alcohol was served, or to marry.

"We dated for several years until they changed the rule," Hayes said. "Then we got married."

Another change for the better was the reduced size of school classes, from 40-plus then, down to about 25 today, the two recalled.

Universal vaccination of children is another improvement. Said Stevens: "When I first started, I caught the mumps within two weeks. I got better, went back to work and caught the measles. You had to develop immunities to everything."

There was much more ethnic awareness in those days. The children "were very emphatic about which nationality they were — Polish, Armenian, Macedonian," Stevens said.

Hayes was originally from near Mattoon, Ill. "When I first came here I had to go to the principal and ask him how to pronounce the names!"

She was hired by the late Madison superintendent of schools, George T. Wilkins Sr., in Union High School. He later became Madison County superintendent of schools and then Illinois superintendent of public instruction.

Martha Hayes

Valerie Stevens

Hayes said that her father, a train conductor, "wasn't anxious for me to come to this area."

Stevens, wife of City Clerk Bob Stevens of Granite City, was hired by the late Superintendent Wensel Brown.

She met her future husband when both sang with KSD-TV's "Protestant Hour" choir.

"She holds a master's degree in music from Northwestern University which she earned by commuting to Evanston, Ill., while continuing to teach here. One indication of Stevens' intense love for and commitment to music is her license plate, MUSIC-1.

"I live and breathe music," she said.

One change the two retiring teachers are not so happy about has to do with child discipline. Children seemed better behaved in the old days, they said.

Stevens remembers taking groups of over 100 students on excursions to St. Louis with just a few adults along to help supervise. She says that probably would be impossible today.

There is much talk these days about the decline of the American educational system, but neither Hayes nor Stevens thinks standards have declined. If there is a problem, they said, it might be in the proliferation of courses required by the state.

"It used to be just reading, writing and arithmetic," Stevens said. "And teachers have much more paperwork today."

Both said the Madison school system does an excellent job, given its resources, which pale beside those of some school systems. Both said they think that schools are being blamed for something that is more the parents' fault.

Said Hayes: "You can tell by a child's skills, attitude and ability to stick to a job what kind of home environment the child has. The parent is the model."

Chaplain's music helps patients at hospital

Music has come to play an important role in providing total patient care at Memorial Hospital and Convalescent Center, 4501 N. Park Drive, Belleville, thanks to the service offered by hospital Chaplain Gerald Wylie.

Tagged the "Singing Chaplain," Wylie has been providing his music ministry to patients and their families for about three months.

Upon request or referral by the patient, family or physician, Wylie sings inspirational tunes for individual patients in their rooms.

"This ministry involves singing hymns and inspirational songs as a means of giving comfort, encouragement, support, and stress therapy to patients," Wylie said.

The patients and their families many times join Wylie singing hymns.

"I have found this ministry to be valuable and helpful in providing total patient care," he added.

He also offers music therapy to patients on two South, the comprehensive medical unit, twice a month.

"By discussing how the music makes patients feel or relating to the feelings expressed in music, they can identify their own feelings in a non-threatening way," Wylie explained. "The music is used as a stimulus for conversation, which reduces the isolation of some patients and increases socialization and self-awareness."

Mormon milestones marked in SIUE professor's new book

Stanley Kimball, professor of historical studies at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, has recently published two new books and is the editor of a third. The SIUE professor is the author of "Historic Sites and Markers Along the Mormon and Other Great Western Trails," published by University of Illinois Press, and "On the Potter's Wheel: The Diaries of Heber C. Kimball," published by Signature Books.

In addition, he is the editor of a book,

Kimball is the great-grandson of Heber C. Kimball, an important figure in early Mormon history.

"The Centennial of the New Piassa Chautauqua, 1885-1985: A Personal History," published privately by Ralph Osborn, an Altonian who still maintains a home in Chautauqua.

Historic Sites and Markers Along the Mormon and Other Great Western Trails is a comprehensive guide to more than 500 historic sites and markers scattered along approximately 10,000 miles of emigrant trails.

The 15 trails and their variants described in the book pass through 15 states from New York to California. The trails include some of the most famous in American history: The Mormon Pioneer Trail, Oregon-California Trail and Santa Fe Trail.

Other emigrant trails presented in the book include the Boonslick, the Overland-Bridge Pass, the Dragoon, the Mormon Handcart Trail, the Trappers-Cherokee Trail, the Fort Leavenworth Military Road, the St. Joseph Trail, the Nebraska City Cut-off, the Golden Road, and the Ox-Bow Trail.

In addition, two other roads west which might properly be called trans-Appalachian trails have been included. One crosses New York from near Binghamton to Buffalo; the other runs from Kiriland, Ohio, to Independence, Mo.

Kimball is the great-grandson of Heber C. Kimball, an important figure in early Mormon history. Heber Kimball was one of the original 12 apostles of the Latter-Day Saints Church, a confidant of both Joseph Smith and Brigham Young (founders of the religious movement), and the first missionary of the church to England.

Heber Kimball produced four diaries between 1837 and 1847. They are housed in the archives of the historical department of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in Salt Lake City, Utah, where they were deposited by the Kimball family in 1903.

Although parts of his diaries have been published before, the originals have never been made available to readers in full until now.

The Centennial of the New Piassa Chautauqua, 1885-1985: A Personal History is a chronological history of Chautauqua, a private community which lies northwest of Alton just off the river road.

The Illinois Chautauqua in New York, a community established by the Sunday School Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was to be the Western Chautauqua.

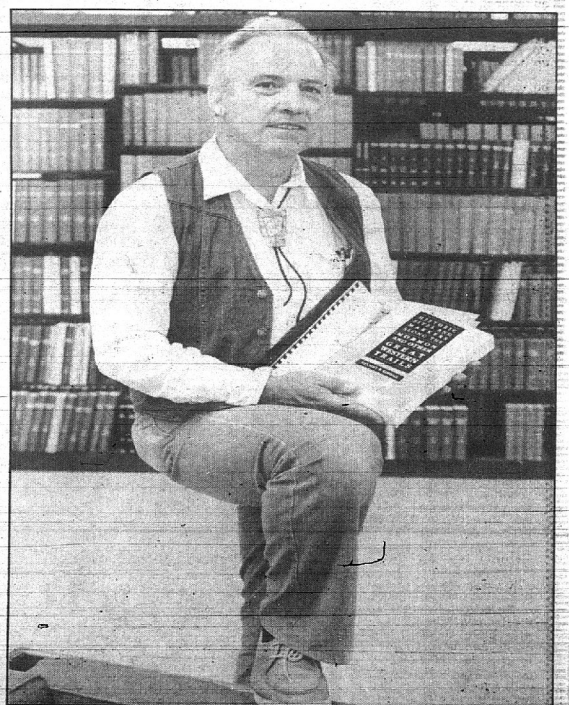

The new book on the subject that Stanley Kimball edited is a colorful history of the land, its earliest settlers, the founding of the religious community in 1885, and its rise, fall and reorganization through two world wars, the roaring '20s, the great depression, and other events of national and international historical significance.

Throughout his life, Kimball has been deeply interested in conducting research relating to Mormon history. He is the author of several books on Mormon history, four books on East European history, and numerous articles in historical journals.

He is also editor of the Latter-Day Saints' Emigrants' Guide, originally published by William Clayton in 1848 as a personal guide to Mormons making the overland trek to Salt Lake City.

In 1982, Kimball received the annual award for the best book written about Mormon history. The recognition was given to the SIUE researcher and author of the book "Heber C. Kimball: Mormon Patriarch and Pioneer," published by the University of Illinois Press.

A nationally recognized authority on western trails, Kimball has served as trail guide and consultant to the National Geographic Society and the National Park Service. He has also served as historian of the Mormon Pioneer Trail Foundation. During the past three summers, he has conducted travel/study tours of the major trails.

For more information on any of the books, interested persons may contact Kimball in the SIUE department of historical studies at 692-3580.

Living Every Day by Bob Thomas, President, Thomas Mortuaries

WHAT IS WALK-ON?

Since our Walk-On Senior Recognition Day, I have had many people ask me just what is Walk-On, and do you have to be a "Thomas Family Member" to participate?

Walk-On is a support group that was originally designed for helping "Thomas Families" deal with the loss of a loved one. However, we quickly realized that there were many people in our community who were suffering from losses, who also needed support. Persons who are divorced can be suffering from a loss, people who have children on drugs can be suffering from a loss of family, people who have loved ones who are dying can be suffering from an "Anticipatory Loss." We also realized that not everyone suffering through the loss of a loved one was a member of the "Thomas Family."

We therefore decided to open Walk-On to anyone who has suffered a loss and needs support in coping with that loss. It is important for these people to have the sense of belonging, that is their first step to building their own support network.

Walk-On actually is two programs that work in conjunction with each other.

Walk-On is our Bereavement Support Group which meets from 7:00 to 9:30 p.m., on the 1st Monday of each month at the Nameoki Presbyterian Church, 1700 Pontoon Road is under the direction of Kathy Nevlin. All persons who have suffered a loss and feel that they are having difficulty dealing with that loss are invited to attend and discuss their problems with others who have suffered similar losses.

Walk-On Social is an extension of our Walk-On Program, under the direction of Rosemarie Brown, that creates social activities for the young and old alike, to assist people in getting back into the mainstream of life and begin to enjoy life again. Walk-On Social plans widely varied monthly programs, dances and trips that are designed to help everyone, regardless of their age, to regain that feeling of companionship that they may have lost.

Once again, Walk-On and Walk-On Social are open to everyone, not just "Thomas Family

Rock music topic of Christian music station

St. Louis' Christian radio station, WCBW 104.9 FM, Columbia, will present Al Menconi's seminar "Rock Music: What Parents Need to Know" on Wednesday, July 6, in St. Louis.

The program will be given from 7 to 10 p.m. at Abundant Life Church, 1809 Des Peres Road.

Called "the leading authority on popular music for the evangelical church," by Christian Film and Video, Al Menconi brings a fresh air to the hot house atmosphere of the rock debate, a subject he has been speaking on since 1972, according to WCBW.

The seminar will answer questions such as how families can encourage members to listen to Christian music. He will also explain why he does not believe most of the prevalent rumors regarding rock music such as demonic beats.

Due to the subject matter, children younger than junior high should not attend.

Those who wish more information should call WCBW 104.9 FM at 281-5100.

Teachers

Two teachers retire from jobs

She said, for example, that parents who use television as their primary source of information can hardly expect their children to grow up with an interest in reading.

Hayes added that a child's self-image is directly connected to how much interest parents take in their activities.

Stevens, who has directed countless school and community musical productions over the years, lamented the tendency of parents to stop attending performances by their children as the students get older.

Both teachers said one of their greatest pleasures and rewards is hearing from students they had taught years ago.

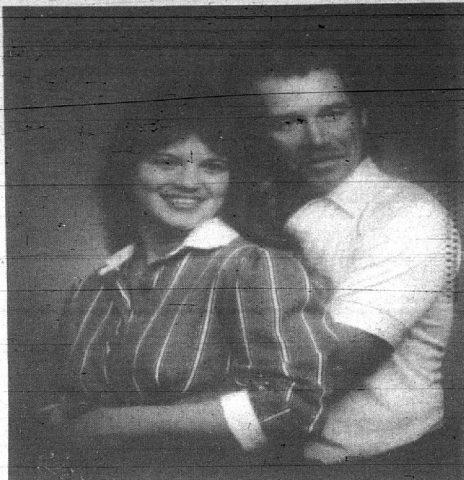

So what does the future hold, now that there's no more homework, no more books, no more students' dirty looks?

Hayes plans to travel with her husband to make up for the many years of evenings spent grading papers. "We're looking forward to getting to know each other better," she said.

Said Stevens: "Bob and I always wrote notes. He was always going to City Hall and I was always putting on a program."

She said her husband plans to run again for city clerk, while she will stay active with charitable causes such as the Shriners' Hospitals for Crippled and Burned Children.

Also active in several social clubs, Stevens is chairman of the Illinois Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma International and recently became the first woman Rotarian in Madison-Venice.

Flea market at Oakmont

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

PONTON BEACH — A new flea market-type operation has started in the Oakmont Trade Center at the Oakmont Shopping Center in the 4000 block of Ponton Road.

"They are trying to get 100 units under one roof and will operate on Friday, Saturdays and Sundays," Trustee Carl Hackney said.

About 15 or 16 vendors of crafts and similar items were at the center last weekend.

Trustees proposed issuing a new type of business license on a limited basis for individuals or firms wishing to occupy space in the trade center for short periods of time.

The village's licensing ordinance does not have a temporary permit clause covering multiple retail sales outlets in a single location, Hackney said.

He proposed the village issue vendors a renewable 90-day permit, costing $10, or a 12-month limited license for $25. A regular retail sales license in the village costs $50 per year.

Village Attorney Keith Jensen was asked to prepare an ordinance for presentation at the board's next meeting.

A fund project will be held to raise money for an addition to the hospital building. Prizes include wildlife prints, a camera and Cardinals baseball tickets.

hairline and wore a mustache and goatee, also black mixed with grey.

Lake Greathouse controls lake level river gets low.

"In a big rain, that canal can go from being 20 feet wide to 60 feet wide in a matter of hours. I've seen it happen."

Greathouse said he doesn't keep track of every opening and closing at Horseshoe, but he soon hears about each from someone.

"We have open warfare about it and it's really a pain in the butt," he said. "The other day we had one of the duck hunters in and, let's see, which side are the duck hunters on? I guess they want it drained, so we opened it and not 24 hours later the guy who rents the boats out there is in complaining it's too low."

"We have some idiots out there. There are guys who use dynamite on the levees we've put in."

"We had someone put a log underneath a low-water dam so we couldn't close the gate. We had to spend a lot of money that time to have divers go and get rid of the log."

IP Company warns of financial woe

Costello is considered a strong favorite over Ellis.

The poll, surveying 300 registered voters in the Illinois 21st Congressional District, reported that 40 percent favored Gaffner, 36 percent were for Democrat Jerry Costello, and 21 percent were uncommitted. The others declined to answer.

American Viewpoint Inc., a Washington-based Republican pollster, conducted the poll during four days in May. Company spokeswoman Linda Duval said the results had about a 6 percent margin of error.

Campaign managers for Gaffner and Costello confirmed the poll results Tuesday. Duval said the poll was prepared for the National Republican Congressional Committee.

The poll showed Gaffner leading in a category called an "informed ballot test," which measures a candidate's support among voters who are asked to respond to a series of questions on local and national issues.

But the poll showed Costello leading 51 percent to 36 percent.

"One time they opened the valves and the beat the stems so we couldn't get them shut. It took us 4-5 days to fix it and everyone had time to plant their gardens."

"It's terrible. I'm not trying to be favorable toward anybody. About a year ago I tried to get a meeting together and work things out, but they'd all bring guns."

Worthen said he has operated the marina for five years and at times the water has gotten too low to float a paddleboat.

"The farmers say that if it gets too high it'll flood their fields and I can understand that," he said. "So I asked them and we agreed on a height."

"But the way they play the game is they call Shane and tell him to drain, but they never call to tell him to stop. Well, I'm not going to play the game anymore."

Nichols said the draining doesn't even cover the input from Granite City Steel and there's not room to store a different market, principally commuters to downtown. "We are charged with offering service to all segments of the community," the St. Louis commissioner said.

Roach argued that, in exchange for the higher bus fares, Bi-State should promise to maintain the current level of bus service. "It's a hardship to pay more money, but it's even worse hardship to lose service," she said.

Bus rides will cost public more needed," complained Marguerite Little, St. Louis, a member the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now. ACORN opposed the fare hike.

"We feel we should not pay more for service we're not receiving," she told commissioners.

"This fare increase is unwarranted," she can tighten our belts," Roy May said.

He was especially critical of over-the-road buses that will ply express routes. Those "stuffed chair buses will carry the affluent and have nothing to do with lower-income riders who depend on the bus system," he said.

The 40 over-the-road coaches will be deleted to Bi-State later this year.

May suggested commissioners consider contracting with a private transit company to run the regional bus system.

Commissioner Tom Purcell defended the over-the-road bus, saying June 2, 1988, at a different market, principally commuters to downtown. "We are charged with offering service to all segments of the community," the St. Louis commissioner said.

Roach argued that, in exchange for the higher bus fares, Bi-State should promise to maintain the current level of bus service. "It's a hardship to pay more money, but it's even worse hardship to lose service," she said.

Commissioners will not vote on route changes until they and Bi-State executives complete a comprehensive analysis of the current route structure in October.

The new fares effective July 1 are:

Children, elderly and handicapped increase 5 cents to 40 cents on local routes in Missouri, 30 cents in Illinois.

Transfers 15 cents, up a nickel.

Unlimited weekly pass $11, up $1; red (unlimited local) pass $35, up $8; gold (unlimited local and express) pass $42, up $6.

The 10-trip commuter ticket increases from $9 to $10.50 in Missouri, $11.50 in Illinois. The 10-trip student ticket increases from $10 to $12.25.

Bi-State will introduce the $21 Blue Permit, which is good on any bus route with a 25-cent cash fare.

The Illinois fares are set by the Madison and St. Clair county transit districts. They pay Bi-State 25 cents for every Illinois rider; that subsidy cuts the scheduled July 1 local fare from 85 cents to 60 cents.

The districts will phase out the per-ride subsidy. The Illinois local fare will increase to 75 cents in 1989, 85 cents in 1990.

In other action, Bi-State commissioners elected Pat Watkins, an Illinois commissioner, as chairman for fiscal 1989.

Purcell was elected vice chairman. Don Klingler treasurer and Robert Fumaneck secretary. Purcell and Klingler are from Missouri, and Fumaneck is from Illinois.

Trivia

The last great Granite City flood started June 3, 1903, when the main pump broke. The Madison levee broke June 6 and the Granite City one a day later. The East Side Flood Protection system was formed in 1908 and there have been no disastrous overflows since then.

Former resident honored

A south St. Louis man, and former resident of Granite City, was honored by the Grand Jury Association's Good Citizenship Fund May 25 for his assistance to an off-duty policeman in pursuit of two suspects accused of robbery and assault.

Jeffrey King, son of Mr. and Mrs. John King, formerly of Granite City, and grandson of Lester and Helen Martin and Martha Page of Granite City, received a Good Citizenship Award and a check for $50, presented in St. Louis at the Ninth District Police Station.

Jeffrey King

On April 27, King was driving his car in midtown St. Louis when he noticed a police officer in pursuit of two juveniles; they had stolen a woman's purse. King offered the officer assistance by giving him a ride in his car.

The men pursued the two youths and the officer made the arrests, thanks to King.

Venice police

Man suffers hand cut

Mitchell Attey, who lives at 66 Venice Homes, told police May 28 a man had cut him on the right hand with a knife, following an argument.

After the incident, which occurred outside a lounge in the 300 block of Weaver Street, the assailant ran into an alley behind the lounge.

An officer talked with the alleged assailant, who said Attey's injury occurred from an object protruding from a chair which was picked up during the argument.

Women harassed on Ill. 3

Laura Hodge, of Kirkpatrick Homes, told police at 12:10 a.m. May 31 that two men in a black car threw a quart-size beer bottle at her car as she was driving south on Illinois 3, north of the Broadway traffic light.

She speeded up the car, but the men caught up with her vehicle at the lights. A passenger jumped out of the other car and the driver got out and handed a baseball bat to the first man, who began swinging the bat at her car. When she got out of her vehicle to see what damage was done to her car, the man started swinging the bat at her.

He also threatened her and a passenger in her car, Melody Caldwell, Mitchell, and called both of them names. Hodge's 1980 auto sustained damage to the hood and right side. Beer had been thrown inside and onto the auto.

Beaten on Weaver Street

Keith Freeman, 26, 907 Washington Ave., Madison, was taken by her mother to St. Elizabeth Medical Center on June 8 after he reported being beaten by three men in the 300 block of Weaver Street. Freeman said he was walking near a confectionery at the time.

Bicyclist, 9, injured

Annie Lyons, 9, 512 Jefferson Ave., Venice, was taken by her mother to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment June 9 after her bicycle was struck by a car in the 1100 block of Seventh Street. Steven Taylor, 19, 1545 Sixth St., Madison, said he was driving north on Seventh and saw two children riding bicycles come from an alley and ride across the street toward the playground at Venice High School.

A third child, Annie, then rode out of the alley into the path of the auto and was hit by the car's left front area, he told police.

Several promoted in Granite City

GRANITE CITY — The Police Department belatedly announced the promotions of three sergeants to lieutenant, one lieutenant to captain, and the lateral transfer of a patrol sergeant to the detective division.

"I guess they kind of got lost in the shuffle with the chief leaving and all," Assistant Chief of Police Ron Selph, himself recently promoted, said. "But they're all really good guys and deserve recognition."

Selph was promoted when former Assistant Chief Jim Lengyel was chosen to replace Police Chief Bob Astorian, who retired to take the top probation position with Madison County.

Kip Pomeroy was promoted to captain to fill the position formerly held by Selph. Promoted to lieutenant were Dennis Chenault, Roy Koberna and Don Knight. Sgt. Dave Ruebhausen was transferred to detective sergeant.

Promotions to sergeant have been temporarily delayed because of a minor administrative flaw in the promotion list. President Leland Ambuehl, Board of Fire and Police Commissioners, said.

Many children being held hostage

To the editor:

Each year the number of children abducted by a parent and taken across international borders increases dramatically.

Recently, I was successful in passing the Hague Convention on International Parental Child Abduction through the Senate.

In the past two years, I have heard from literally hundreds of parents with tragic stories of their children being abducted and forced to live with a parent in a foreign country, traumatically thrust into a new culture and a new language.

Illinois State Police assert that the trauma associated with an abduction of this kind, and the subsequent deprivation of one parent's love, is one of the most horrendous forms of child abuse.

No one knows for sure how many parents have been victimized by international parental child abduction.

Over 2,500 cases have been reported to the State Department since 1975, but most experts believe this number is far too low. Some believe there may have been as many as 10,000 internationally abducted children.

Each year, 300 to 400 new cases are reported, and the problem is getting worse.

According to State Department statistics, the total number of cases has jumped 84 percent since May 1983. In 1987 alone, there was a 60 percent increase in Illinois.

Once the children are taken from this country, their rightful custodians rarely have any possibility of recovering them.

While I do not provide for the recognition and enforcement of foreign custody decrees, it establishes a system of administrative and legal procedures designed to ensure the prompt return of children who are wrongfully removed to, or retained in, a ratifying country.

The courts in the country to which the child has been taken are under treaty obligation to return the child to the country from which he or she was abducted.

The foreign court must comply without conducting any proceedings on the merits of the underlying custody claims. Thus, it denies the abductor the legal advantage currently gained through international abduction.

In 1980, the Hague Convention was adopted by unanimous vote of the 23 countries which participated in the negotiation of this agreement, and is currently in force in nine of these countries.

Reportedly, once the United States formally ratifies the Hague Convention, several additional countries are likely to follow.

Secretary of State George Shultz says nearly half of all reported parental kidnappings in the past several years have involved abductions to countries which participated in the preparation and negotiation of the Hague Convention.

Therefore, if all the signatory nations ratify the Convention, the impact would be impressive.

Having passed the Senate, the legislation will now go to the House of Representatives and on to the president for signing.

At the same time, the State Department must continue to encourage ratification of the convention by the other 13 countries which participated in the negotiations.

The Hague Convention is only a first step, to controlling these tragic child abductions.

Each week, eight more American children are abducted.

I want to see this legislation passed and see the statistics turn into numbers of cases solved each year, rather than numbers of cases reported.

Don't surrender war against drugs

To the editor:

Frustrated by the high cost and indecisive results of the war on drugs, a number of influential Americans are suggesting we should give up the fight and legalize heroin, cocaine, marijuana and other now illicit narcotics.

Writing in the New York Times on March 17, David Boaz, vice president of the Cato Institute, a respected Washington, D.C., think tank, said: "We can either escalate the war on drugs, which would have dire implications for civil liberties and the right to privacy, or find a way to gracefully withdraw."

He argued that "the cost of the war — in billions of dollars, runaway crime rates and restrictions on our personal freedom — is too high."

Washington Post columnist Edwin Yoder has pronounced our war on drugs "dumb," and likened it to the anti-alcohol "prohibition fiasco" of the 1920s.

Rather than try to "suppress an insuppressible traffic," Yoder suggests that we concentrate on education, medication, counseling and "yes, state-controlled dispensation" of heroin, cocaine, marijuana and all the other drugs we're now trying to eliminate.

The major benefit, he contends, would be to drive the drug smugglers and traffickers out of business.

Even the conservative National Review has described "the war on dope" as a "spectacular flop" and questions whether it's worth the trouble.

"The choice we face today," it said, "is (1) keep drugs illegal (and therefore extremely expensive) who grating our teeth against overcrowded prisons and crime-ridden cities, or (2) legalize the stuff (making it as cheap as, say, alcohol) and let the druggies — the ones who cannot be persuaded to quit by intensive educational efforts — fall where they may."

Most law authorities, however, see things differently. One of the most compelling cases for continuing the war against drugs is advanced by the attorney general of Pennsylvania, LeRoy Zimmerman. Arguing that "legalizing crime is no way to stop criminal activity," Zimmerman said drug abuse is not a victimless crime.

"Half of Philadelphia's child-abuse fatalities involve parents who are heavy users of cocaine. The use of cocaine contributed to these children's deaths. Would legal and cheaper cocaine reduce such crimes?"

Zimmerman also cited last year's Conrail accident that involved an engineer and brakeman who smoked marijuana and that resulted in 16 fatalities.

Contrary to what many advocates of legalization contend, he said, marijuana is not safe, and that fact is finally getting through to young Americans.

Nor would legalizing drugs end drug trafficking be safe. As the Pennsylvania attorney general said, "We cannot stop drugs from entering America until America stops tolerating drug abuse."

"We learned from the Vietnam experience that a nation cannot fight a war successfully without a united home front. Unlike Vietnam, this battle is being waged in our neighborhoods, on our street corners, and in our homes. If it is a fight for the hearts, minds and futures of our children. And there is no place to which we can withdraw."

More foster families needed in area

To the editor:

A loving mother and father, intelligent, well-mannered children, a cozy home, a great location, a great school, a great neighborhood, a great future — all these things are at odds with one another.

Today's children are faced with problems of violence, drug use, extreme pressure to be promiscuous, and a great fear of what the future holds.

To make matters worse, some children are being themselves where they belong. For these children — who have often been abused, neglected or abandoned — foster homes are a welcome refuge.

More than 16,000 children live apart from their families in Illinois. The courts have separated them from their parents because of abuse, neglect or abandonment.

According to the state Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS), the need for foster families is increasing as the number of reported cases of abuse grows. In 1987, the number of reported abuse cases was up 30 percent from the year before to 92,000. The department estimates the number will increase by about 2,000 this year.

In an effort to increase public awareness of the need for foster families, DCFS and church organizations statewide are conducting "Foster Parent Sabbaths."

Under the program, religious leaders are asked to promote the foster family program and encourage people to consider becoming foster parents. The program was inspired by DCFS' "One Church, One Child" program, which looks for adoptive parents.

Since 1984, One Church, One

Child has been credited with reducing the number of children in foster care from 1,002 to 127 throughout Illinois.

Fifty-six private agencies provide foster care in Illinois, placing a wide range of children in foster homes. Some are infants who have been neglected. Some are pregnant teens. Still others are "streetwise" kids.

All of them need the love and security a foster home can provide. DCFS says the greatest need is for foster parents willing to take infants and adolescents into their homes.

For many children, being placed with a foster family is a temporary measure — until their own family can get counseling and they can be reunited.

For others, a foster family is a step on the road to adoption or other permanent living arrangements. For a third group, living with a foster family is a desirable alternative to an institutional setting.

Regardless of the reason why a child is being placed in foster care, every effort is made to place the child with a relative, according to DCFS.

The department says this is the best way to make a smooth transition for a child who has often been traumatized by his or her family situation. However, DCFS is not required by law to place a child with a relative.

A bill recently passed by the Illinois House could change this. Under the measure, a close relative who comes forward or can be identified — and who goes through an immediate preliminary approval by DCFS — can be selected as a preferred care provider for a child.

The relative must agree to a complete review by the department. "Close relative" includes parent, grandparent, uncle, aunt, adult brother and adult sister. The bill now goes to the Senate.

DCFS believes the need for foster families will continue to grow as more children become victims of their parents' drug problems, their own drug abuse, and terminal diseases such as AIDS.

As children's problems become increasingly more serious, foster parents are becoming a more recognized, specialized, integral part of the system.

For these reasons, a reservoir of foster families is needed to adequately provide caring, loving homes for these children.

Nothing's so common as yards and yards of fabric floating around a bedroom. One day, a woman in a nightgown was hung from a swing in the ceiling and spread over the corner of the bed.

When exterior paint peels down to the bare wood or masonry, there's a moisture problem. Vapor barrier should keep indoor moisture from escaping through the walls. Caulking is vital to keep outside air from seeping in.

Water stains on a wood floor, if they're just in the finish, will respond to rubbing with a good cleanser and/or with fine steel wool. But if the stain's gone through to the wood itself, it calls for sanding and repainting.

Police problems put in proper perspective

Granite City's Police Department is bulldozing through embarrassing disclosures of alleged misfits in uniform.

The department will benefit from the experience, though the process may be painful.

Problems began in 1985 with Mayor Von Dee Cruse's replacement of Police Chief Ron Veizer with political favorite Bill Harris. That drew fire, but under Harris the department operated with quiet efficiency few knew quiet discontent also operated.

In 1985, some policemen drew battle lines because remarkably high test scores enabled James Reader and David Rosenberg to become sergeants. The test's third-place finisher, Tim Lyerla, sought an investigation that surfaced in 1987 with calls for indictments — some say the calls resulted from animosity between Cruse and a rival, 4th Ward Alderman Dan Partney. The case is in litigation.

Another problem is the revolving door on the chief's office, with Veizer out in 1985; Harris out July 21, 1987, while under fire from Partney; and Police Chief Robert Astorian out June 1 to take another job, putting the department under the leadership of James Lengyel, chief four in year three of the Cruse administration.

Constant change hurts a department even in good times.

There's more — patrolmen admitted bar hopping in a police car, another is charged with high-speed joy riding to Jersey County while on duty, and another is charged with being a Peeping Tom.

Granite City's trouble is not unique. Problems elsewhere do not erase those here, but provide perspective.

Dirt here does not pile up against St. Louis. Patrolman Anthony D. Daniele's conviction in federal court June 9 for conspiring to defraud that department's pension fund, KNOM-TV Channel 4's reporter, Matt Meagher, buried Sauget Police Department's image with reports Jan. 26-29, 1987, concerning that department's failure to bust drunk drivers leaving Sauget nightclubs; ongoing East St. Louis Police Department troubles include inadequate equipment and ouzi-carrying bodyguards for its colorful mayor, Cowboy Carl Officer.

Another perspective is that the department's problems provide benefits. They are met openly and are winding through the legal system, allowing the Cruse administration to boast it will not tolerate questions of wrongdoing.

These factors show the department has greater integrity than its high-profile problems indicate. Despite trouble, Granite City has an educated, professional police force — one better than the tarnished image created for it by feuding politicians and a few hairball cops who need to be cut from the ranks.

Not yet a burning issue

Unless an issue takes a firm hold on citizens' attention, it is difficult to muster large turnouts at public meetings. A case in point is the question of whether to schedule a convention to revise the 1970 Illinois State Constitution.

"Con con" hearings in Collinsville and elsewhere attracted slim audiences, disappointing Lt. Gov. George H. Ryan, chairman, and others on a 50-member committee studying the proposal. Another pattern noted was that, of those who did attend, most favored holding a convention to rewrite the constitution.

The question, which must be submitted to voters every two decades, will be on the Nov. 8 ballot. In general, elected officials from both parties favor a "no" vote, while reformer Patrick Quinn's followers are encouraging a "yes" vote.

Convention opponents argue that the constitution can be revised at any time, by the people approving specific changes; proponents say more sweeping changes ought to be made, by convening a group of delegates.

Voters will decide, through a special ballot at the general election. We hope more people bother to mark the ballot, one way or the other, than bothered to attend the discussions about it.

Alzheimer research vital

An example of the positive impact of Southern Illinois University is its School of Medicine, based at Carbondale classrooms and Springfield hospitals. The school has been chosen to evaluate metrifonate as a treatment for Alzheimer's, a disease that slowly robs its victims of their minds and their lives.

The SIU medical school also is testing two other drugs, physostigmine and THA, which have shown potential for use with Alzheimer's patients.

Metrifonate inhibits a brain enzyme known as cholinesterase; the drug has been used to treat parasitic ailments, and SIU research indicates it also may be effective against Alzheimer's.

Now the fourth most common cause of death among the elderly, the progressive brain disorder blights the lives of its victims and their families. A cure is badly needed; it would be hard to think of a more worthy effort than that being made by SIU.

Public has right to transit safety

To the editor:

People who operate trains, airplanes and commercial trucks are responsible for the lives of millions of Americans. Every day, engineers, brakemen, pilots and professional truck drivers take control of large and complicated machinery.

When they are on the job, they hold in their hands the lives of innocent men, women and children.

When I proposed random drug and alcohol testing for key transportation workers, critics said that the legislation would be an invasion of privacy. A passenger's luggage can be searched, but a pilot can't be tested for drugs? This is a ridiculous argument.

Here is the real argument against random drug testing: "To heck with the public."

I pushed the bill to debate in the Senate. We won an overwhelming, bipartisan victory. For months, the House has dragged its feet on the bill.

Yet, over the past 16 months, a major rail accident involving drugs or alcohol has occurred on the average of once every 16 days. Overall, one rail accident in five involves substance abuse.

Recently, survivors of people killed in the Chase Maryland, rail accident turned up the heat.

Sixteen people died at Chase; 175 were injured. Why? The engineer and brakeman on a Conrail train were smoking marijuana in the cab. They ignored four stop signals before rolling into the path of an Amtrak passenger train.

The first move was for the House and Senate to come to terms on a strong bill to beef up enforcement of rail safety rules.

For the first time, federal officials will be able to impose penalties directly on railroad employees and managers. At present, penalties can be imposed on rail lines but not on individuals.

Penalties were increased dramatically, to $10,000 from a limit of $2,500. A $20,000 fine can be imposed for repeated violations. And, for the first time, federal standards will be set for licensing train engineers.

This is progress. But it isn't enough. The House still has not acted on random testing. Some rail labor organizations continue to fight random testing; so far, the House has been listening.

The Senate proposal requires several kinds of testing: pre-employment screening; regular testing on the job; testing when an employee is visibly impaired; testing after serious accidents; and random testing. Random testing is the most important because it is the best deterrent.

To safeguard employee rights, a positive test would have to be confirmed by a second, more specific laboratory test. That laboratory would have to meet new, strict certification standards.

If a positive test is confirmed, the employee would be pulled from safety duty immediately, with no guarantee to any job right.

For workers who come forward on their own for help with a drug or alcohol problem, rehabilitation would be required, with no return to safety duty unless rehabilitation is successful.

We must have random testing. The Conrail engineer at Chase, Md., told me at a recent hearing that random testing is the most effective step Congress can take to clean up the railroads.

It would be an outrage for Congress to buckle to pressure from some rail workers. I am absolutely determined to push random drug testing in every possible way, because the public has some rights, too.

Some views on the news

Not everything is wonderful, not everything is bad, we report a balance and it makes some people mad, but for those of you who want to hear everything is fine here's an imaginary story from sweet Pollyanna's mind:

The city's downtown project has turned away a score of out-of-town merchants who want the anchor store.

Police department's humming, each man a paycheck owed, they have no calls to answer, no tickets to unload.

The drunken bums and burglars, the thieves and malcontents have fled our city's borders, warned others as they went, to bypass Granite City a place too clean for dirt, where everything is perfect — even Satan would convert!

Every city resident goes out to do his share to clean up city garbage till none sits anywhere.

The rain comes when it's wanted, and sun comes just the same, and solar eclipses, well, they don't fit in the game.

Yes, everyone is happy, no brooding folk at all, the joys of Granite living make short men 6 feet tall, and fannies drop their tonnage and thinnes pick it up, and uglies become pretties and ugly dogs jump like pups.

Sewer lines flowing briskly, run babbling to the sea, wide roads and alleys sparkle all's perfect harmony.

Our aldermen don't quarrel, school patronage is out, and somewhere men are laughing and somewhere children shout.

Because our city's perfect as Wonderland can be some wonder why the paper can't see the way they see.

But reality is hard, unlike this witty ditty, though much is good there's bad right here in Granite City.

About real estate

By Don Campbell

Home buyers warned of buy-down hazards

Dear Mr. Campbell: I enjoy your column very much and have taken your advice with great results. Last year I bought a bank-owned house at a very good price. I know it was a good price because there were six bids on it the first day on the market. I also negotiated a 3-2-1 buy-down starting at 7 percent for 30 years. The bank was anxious to get rid of the house so they also fixed all the things my inspector found wrong, with the exception of cosmetic items.

I think your readers, especially first-time buyers, should answer the pitfalls involved with buy-downs. I really didn't think an annual increase of $50 a month was going to be tough. But I did not realize the amount of money required to maintain and improve a house since I had never owned one.

Over the next three years, my mortgage will increase a total of $150 a month. The mortgage is on my last salary increase. Fortunately, I started a new job at $5,000 more a year and also have a roommate. Otherwise I would be facing an extremely strict budget for years to come. I expect that homeownership would have become a burden rather than a pleasure.

I am interested in the effect of the buy-down on the profit if I sell the house. The mortgage is for $71,000 with an escrow account of $3,600 for the buy-down costs. Did I pay $71,000 or $67,400? Fortunately, the house is worth over $76,000 so, should I need to sell, I am not in the situation of many new home buyers with artificial buy-downs. What is the effect of the buy-down on the profit-loss picture?

M.J.S.

Answer: You really got a live one in that zealous bank! And how smart of you to call in an inspector before the deal closed. Congratulations all the way around.

Yes, the buy-down has its hazards, all right, if the theory of it breaks down: that the buyer's income will increase in tandem with the escalating costs as the interest rate, beginning at 3 percentage points below market, jumps up to 2 points below, then 1 point below, and finally, to the true market rate.

Fortunately, it worked out in your case but you are quite right — it frequently doesn't. What you actually paid for the house is not what you will write in stone. You've got a $71,000 mortgage and nothing short of refinancing and normal reduction of principal through amortization is going to change that.

The only other key element here, according to one prominent real estate attorney with whom I discussed it, is what disposition (if any) is made of that escrow account if you sell the house before the buy-down runs out.

Take a look at your sales agreement, he suggests. Does any credit remaining in that account (the up-front money your developer or builder paid for the subsidized interest rate) revert to the developer in case you sell before the terms of the buy-down have been satisfied? Or is it credited to you?

ILRDP survey reports progress made improving workers' literacy

The Illinois Literacy Resource Development Project (ILRDP), one of the first demonstration literacy projects funded through the Gannett Foundation, has conducted a statewide survey of adult educators and literacy volunteer programs providing workplace literacy services to business, industry and labor.

Results show that over 65 Illinois adult education and literacy volunteer programs provide job-integrated classes in which basic reading, writing, math, problem-solving and communication skills are directly integrated into the curriculum and instruction.

Adult Basic Education (ABE), General Educational Development (GED) and English as a Second Language (ESL) are taught at more than 100 businesses, industries and labor organizations. Many programs also offer literacy volunteer tutoring as one option from which to choose.

Additionally, it was found that over 50 related agencies work closely with the adult education programs in providing workplace literacy classes. At present, there are at least 30 resource experts in Illinois who have experience developing and implementing such programs.

During the past year, 15 workplace literacy technical assistance workshops and presentations have been given to adult education and literacy volunteer providers and related state agencies to raise awareness and prepare them to effectively address the issue.

In Illinois, as is true elsewhere in the United States, the service industry is increasing while the manufacturing industry is decreasing. The jobs available in the service industry require higher-level problem-solving, communication, reading, writing and math skills.

As society moves from industrial to information processing, the skills required to obtain and maintain a job are increasingly complex and technical, unlike the skills required 20, 30 or 50 years ago, an ILRDP spokesman said.

The median number of years of schooling required for a job in the future is 13. Fortunately, human skills and human resources are increasingly being recognized as important to Illinois and the nation's economic development," the spokesman said.

For more information concerning workplace literacy programs and efforts, Suzanne Knell, director, ILRDP, can be contacted at 217-850-1318.

Record month

JIM SQUIRES, director of steelmaking, Granite City Division, National Steel Corp., congratulates furnace man Mike Novosel, Basic Oxygen Furnace, on having produced a record 201,795 tons of liquid steel during May. Looking on, from the left, are Ray Stokes, manager, BOF-Foundry maintenance, Ted Kocot, manager, Steel Conversion, Frank Squires said the production was accomplished by tapping 889 heats of steel that averaged 227.2 tons. The usual monthly average is 180,000 tons. "This major achievement is a reflection of the attitudes and efforts being put forth by the employees of Granite City Division," Squires said.

Survey indicates employers anticipate bright job future

Employers in the St. Louis area anticipate moderate, stable hiring for the summer months, according to the Employment Outlook Survey released June 6 by Manpower Inc.

"Of the area employers polled about third-quarter hiring plans, 18 percent see more jobs on the horizon," Ron Ramler, manager, Manpower's St. Louis offices, said. "Five percent expect a decline and 74 percent plan to remain at current levels. Three percent are uncertain of personnel needs."

Last summer, the employment picture was similar as 20 percent forecast more jobs and 5 percent expected a slowdown. Three months ago, 23 percent expressed plans to add workers and 12 percent predicted fewer job opportunities.

Across the nation, the summer job market looks healthy, as 31 percent expect to boost staff size and only 6 percent plan job cuts.

In the Midwest, 31 percent plan additions and 7 percent expect cuts.

In St. Louis, job opportunities are predicted in the sectors of durable goods manufacturing, wholesale and retail trade, insurance, real estate, and service.

Reductions are foreseen in the transportation and public utilities sectors. Non-durable goods producers expect a mix of new hiring and job cutbacks.

Nationwide, the survey results are surprisingly optimistic even for the summer season, which is historically the brightest employment quarter.

Thirty-one percent of the nearly 14,000 employers polled plan to add to their job banks while only 6 percent had a workforce reduction in mind. This is projected to be the most promising third quarter in 10 years.

Consumer tips
Procedures to become notary explained

Q. I'd like to become a notary public. I work in a small office and feel that our clients would like the convenience of a notary on the premises. How do I go about applying?

A. Notaries public are public officials who act as unbiased witnesses to the identity of persons who come before them for certain purposes, such as signing deeds. Notaries thus exercise tremendous responsibility in the prevention of frauds and forgeries.

In Illinois, notaries are appointed by the secretary of state for terms of four years at a time. They must obtain a $3,000 notary bond from a bonding or surety company, and must also have and use a rubber-stamp seal in the form specified in the Illinois Notary

Public Act.

Applications are submitted through the Index Department of the Secretary of State, which also publishes the "Illinois Notary Public Handbook." This booklet contains a copy of the act as well as detailed information for and about notaries.

To obtain a copy of the booklet and application materials, write to the Honorable Jim Edgar, Secretary of State, Index Department, 111 E. Monroe St., Springfield, Ill. 62756.

Fee for security?

Q. I am a senior citizen. Recently I received a letter from a company offering a Social Security earnings record for a yearly fee. Do you think this is legitimate?

A. Certain companies often target senior citizens by offering a Social Security earnings record to those willing to pay a yearly fee for the service. But, this is something you can obtain without charge.

Simply contact your local Social Security Office and request a Statement of Earnings Form SSA-7004-P. Complete and return the form to Social Security and a copy of earnings recorded by Social Security will be mailed to you within a few weeks.

You should check your Social Security earnings record every three years, or more often if you change jobs frequently, to make sure it coincides with your records.

Seeking a lawyer

Q. My neighbor and I have been involved in a land dispute for some time, and she finally decided to take me to court to get it all settled. My friends and family tell me I ought to get a lawyer, but I don't understand why I should have to spend money on legal fees when I believe that I'm not in the wrong.

A. It's difficult to tell how complicated your situation is from the information you give, but even in a simple disagreement the advice of a lawyer can be well worth the cost, not the least for your own peace of mind.

Some disputes involve complex questions of law that only an attorney can answer.

THE LAW AND YOU
BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

Recently a man came to this office several months after he fell on a wet floor in a grocery store. The man spoke very little English, and the representatives of the store convinced him to sign a release in exchange for $1200. After later consulting with a doctor, the injured party learned that he had a possible herniated disc in his back which could require surgery. Can he avoid the release and reopen the claim?

To answer this question, one must first understand the nature of a release under Illinois law. A release is actually a contract between the parties. In the normal situation, one party will give up his right to pursue this claim in exchange for the payment of money. One way to set aside this document is for the injured party to show a mutual mistake by the parties with regard to the nature of the injuries.

In one 1960 case, a man was injured in an automobile accident. His injuries were cuts and bruises accompanied by mild headaches. After an apparent complete recovery, which took about three months, the injured party signed a release in exchange for $900. Three months later he required brain surgery to remove a blood clot. Subsequent treatment and secondary surgery failed to alleviate the condition, and one year later the man was a mental incompetent.

The Appellate Court upheld an avoidance of the release and also upheld a subsequent money judgment of over $40,000. The Court noted that releases should be vacated where there is a mutual mistake as to the nature and extent of a person's injuries. In this case, the man's injuries appeared to have healed, and the treating physicians saw nothing to suggest the blood clot which later developed on the brain. The Court also emphasized that only $900 has been paid originally, which appeared to further indicate that the parties were ignorant of the extent of the injury. The Court noted that $900 failed to even cover the original property damage and medical bills incurred during the injured man's apparent convalescence.

In light of this decision, can the man who fell in the grocery store avoid the release? There certainly appears to be a mutual mistake as to the nature and extent of his injuries, similar to the case discussed above. This, then, coupled with the man's inability to understand English, may be enough to reopen the case.

Navy seeks Illinois sailors for new ship

Navy recruiters in Illinois are looking for 80 men to join the Navy and serve aboard the "Land of Lincoln" namesake aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln.

The recruits will be sworn in at the Old State Capitol Building in Springfield on Oct. 19 and trained at Great Lakes Naval Training Center, Ill.

Upon graduation from basic training and occupational training, they will report for duty aboard the USS Abraham Lincoln.

This is the first time that Illinois residents have had the opportunity to enlist into the Navy as a group, train together in basic training, and then serve as a group on the ship named to honor their state's most famous son.

Young men with high school diplomas, between ages 17 to 35, and in good health are eligible to join. Enlistment in this program is limited to the first 80 qualified applicants. Women are not eligible to serve aboard USS Abraham Lincoln since federal law prohibits women from serving on combatant vessels.

Local Navy recruiters can provide more details. Residents of Southern Illinois may call 1-800-942-4839 for more information.

USS Abraham Lincoln, currently under construction, will be the fifth nuclear-powered carrier of the Nimitz class.

At 1,092 feet, it is longer than three football fields placed end to end. Its flight deck covers 4.5 acres. With the carrier's air wing, USS Abraham Lincoln will be home to almost 6,000 sailors.

New plastic may ease disposal burden

By Joyce Hackel

WASHINGTON — Legislation designed to promote the manufacture of biodegradable plastics made from corn starch and other agricultural products could help ease the nation's waste disposal burden, it is being asserted here.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, introduced the plastics bill within days of an announcement by Archer-Daniels-Midland Co., the Decatur, Ill.-based commodity firm, that it had won the world rights to a British invention that combines plastics with corn starch.

The new process can be used to produce plastic bags which decompose into fine dust in three years instead of the 400 years that elapses before normal plastics break down.

Plastics made with corn starch can break down in three years, according to the National Corn Growers Association, a key group promoting biodegradable products.

The bill, co-sponsored by five midwestern senators, encourages use of the new plastics by requiring the government to buy biodegradable plastics when available and providing $20 million per year for three years to subsidize their production.

Americans are currently producing about 150 million tons of solid waste per year, and 7 percent of that waste is composed of plastics.

Current technology allows the production of biodegradable plastics composed of from 6 to 18 percent agricultural products, according to Randy Klein, field services director for the Nebraska Corn Growers Association.

"The corn starch attracts the microorganisms that are in the soil," Klein said. "Not all of the plastic is going to break down; there will be some remaining." Klein said that if Glenn's bill became law, corn farmers would have to meet a new potential demand of 300 million more bushels of corn per year.

In addition to plastic bags, manufacturers have produced a biodegradable gallon milk jug made with corn starch, but it has not yet been cleared by the Food and Drug Administration.

ADM, a major American corn-starch producer, plans to work with Amko Plastics Inc. to create bags and other products.

The process ADM is developing could be used to develop burger boxes for fast food restaurants, it is believed.

Authorities say plastics made with corn starch could lessen the nation's waste disposal headaches. More than half of the major U.S. cities will exhaust their current landfill capacity by 1990, Kasten said.

Expanded anti-drug proposal endorsed

Top officials of Illinois' leading alcoholism and substance abuse prevention and treatment organization have praised Gov. James R. Thompson's plan to boost spending for various programs as part of his new tax increase proposal.

"The Illinois Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Association has reviewed the governor's tax plan, and we strongly support it," said Melody Heaps, president of the organization, which is comprised of more than 100 community-based providers and 1,000 treatment and prevention professionals.

"Substance abuse is our number one health problem. It poses a danger to all communities, regardless of resources. The governor's plan for new and expanded services for treatment and prevention includes the targeting of the groups most at risk," Heaps said.

Earlier this year, IADDA delivered its own "state of the state" message focusing on crises that had developed in various programs across Illinois because of limited funding.

IADDA officials noted the governor is proposing an increase in the Illinois Department of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse budget of $2.1 million for the upcoming fiscal year.

Bond will keep open mind on Scott Base

By Edward T. Hearn
P-R/J Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Despite earlier statements to the contrary, Missouri Sen. Christopher S. "Kit" Bond has not ruled out going along with a plan to introduce civilian air transportation at Scott Air Force Base, Bond's top aide, Warren Erdman, said.

Bond was quoted earlier as saying he would "fight making a second passenger airport in the St. Louis region," but Erdman said Bond had been speaking "hypothetically" with a reporter.

Erdman said Bond's plan was to withhold judgment on joint civilian and military use at Scott until the St. Louis Airport Authority has completed its study on the future of Lambert-St. Louis International Airport.

"The concern that he has expressed is that he doesn't feel that we should divert or change the mission of Lambert in the St. Louis metropolitan area until this 18-month study has been reviewed," Erdman said.

St. Louis city officials approved the $1.3 million airport study in April, putting off Bond's verdict on joint use at Scott until at least late 1989. At that time, a city-hired consultant will unveil a master plan that addresses Lambert's needs until 2005.

With the number of passengers using Lambert expected to increase by about 75 percent during the next 12 years, from 10.1 million passengers to about 17.6 million yearly, additional runway construction and land acquisition — despite the land scarcity near Lambert — are likely recommendations.

"None of the options is inexpensive," said Don Aubuchon, assistant director of business and finance for the St. Louis Airport Authority, which operates Lambert.

Bond's views were in response to the new Federal Aviation Administration report stating that joint use of Scott was "technically feasible" in three to five years, putting the cost at about $250 million.

Sen. John Danforth, unlike fellow Republican Bond, has not taken a stand on the FAA report. Danforth press secretary Steve Hilton said the senator considered the future of Lambert an important issue, but no time for an announcement had been planned.

The FAA plan would include a new passenger terminal and a 10,000-foot runway to accommodate all types of commercial and civilian aviation at Scott and to relieve continued congestion at Lambert, the nation's 12th busiest airport.

Although the military permits civilian use at 20 U.S. bases, Scott Air Force Base officials have yet to endorse joint use, saying the topic will be considered "if it does not compromise military response, security, readiness, safety or quality of life."

Scott, the second largest military base in Illinois with 8,700 military and civilian personnel, is the base for three major military commands. At least one Air Force officer told the FAA joint use could develop into traffic delays and airspace conflicts with Lambert.

Illinois' Democratic Sens. Alan Dixon and Paul Simon said the Scott Air Force Base officials had legitimate concerns that needed to be addressed, although Dixon was pleased with the FAA findings, saying an alternative to Lambert had to be found.

State news

AIDS, IV drug use subject of policies

A wide range of activities and policies aimed at preventing further AIDS cases among intravenous drug users have been recommended by the Illinois Department of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse.

It is believed that intravenous drug users are among the most rapidly growing group of AIDS cases, and there are about 85,000 to 100,000 IV drug users in the state. As of March, the state had about 1,692 cases of AIDS.

The department will focus on counseling, testing, research, training, prevention, drug treatment and public information.

State taxpayers give to provide for blind

State taxpayers contributed nearly $83,000 to the Assistance to the Blind Fund during the 1988 filling year, by using a new check-off on their state income tax returns. About 9,728 made contributions.

The money will be used to purchase computers and other technology to benefit state residents who are blind or have visual impairments.

However, because contributions did not reach the $100,000 mark, this item will not be included on next year's tax forms. Contributions can be made until Oct. 1 and may be mailed to the Illinois Department of State Affairs, Services, Accounting Office, P.O. Box 19429, Springfield, Ill. 62794-9429.

International fairs to emphasize exports

The state has initially targeted participation in 26 international trade fairs and trade missions throughout the world during the coming year.

Illinois businesses will have an opportunity to showcase their products and services in China, Korea, Japan, Singapore, Hungary, Saudi Arabia, Turkey, Thailand and the Soviet Union.

About 270,000 jobs in the state are tied directly to export activities.

Governor signs bill to pay medical costs

Gov. James R. Thompson has signed a bill to appropriate money to pay medical providers during the state's upcoming fiscal year, which begins July 1.

Lack of money had created hardships for some including hospitals, nursing homes and pharmacists — not being reimbursed for services. The bill, which appropriates $158.2 million to medical providers, gives the Department of Public Health and the state comptroller authority to prepare payments to medical providers, to be sent as soon as possible after July 1.

Traditionally, providers have had to wait up to three weeks at the beginning of a new year before the comptroller sent their payments.

Motor deaths up in May comparisons

The death count for those traveling in vehicles in Illinois during May totaled 107, an increase from the five-year, pre-seatbelt-law average of 83 deaths, according to provisional figures released by the Department of Transportation and Department of State Police.

Overall fatalities, including pedestrians and bicyclists, for May totaled 142 as a result of 127 accidents. This is an increase of 34 percent from the 106 deaths in May 1987.

Those who died in this state included 15 pedestrians, five killed at railroad crossings, 18 motorcyclists and two persons on bicycles.

Matthew 8:26 "And he saith unto them, Why are ye so fearful, O ye of little faith."

The Lord and his disciples were in a ship and a storm arose suddenly. They were about to capsize and ran to waken Jesus from his sleep. He asked them why they were so fearful. After all he was in the ship too. He spoke to the sea and it became calm instantly.

We must always be aware of the fact that Jesus is in our ship also. He doesn't want us to fail or go under. Because when we fail, we bring reproach on God.

He has promised never to leave or forsake us. He that is in us is greater than he that is in the world. We can do all things through Christ.

Great faith will banish fear forever.

Have faith in God. Today!

Edgar praises support for car insurance

SPRINGFIELD — Secretary of State Jim Edgar has hailed strong House backing for legislation that would require all Illinois motorists to carry liability insurance.

The House approved the measure 89-22 and sent it to the Senate for further action. The most affirmative House vote tally the measure had previously garnered was 68 in 1985.

"The overwhelming vote makes me more optimistic than ever that 1988 will be the year for long-awaited mandatory insurance legislation in Illinois," he said.

Edgar said organizations and individuals must continue lobbying efforts: "It is vital that they work equally as hard — if not harder — in the Senate."

Illinois is among 11 states in the nation that do not have mandatory insurance laws, and Florida is the only other populous state without one.

Two million of Illinois' seven million registered cars and pickup trucks are not covered by insurance. The Department of Insurance reports that 26 percent of passenger cars are uninsured, and the Department of Transportation confirms that more than 60,000 uninsured drivers are involved in accidents each year.

The mandatory insurance legislation approved by the House focuses on suspension of vehicle registrations instead of driver licenses, a move to cut administrative costs. In addition, it provides for reinstatement fees for those whose registrations have been suspended. The program should pay for itself, Edgar said.

Curtis chairs Great Lakes area coalition

Thomas B. Curtis, who was a Republican congressman from Missouri for 18 years, has been elected chairman of the American National Great Lakes Coalition.

The coalition is an organization formed in 1986 dedicated to promoting stabilization of water levels in the Great Lakes basin. The organization, with headquarters in Saugatuck, Mich., represents more than 10,000 Great Lakes shoreline property owners.

Curtis lived in Webster Groves from 1951 to 1969 while serving in the House, where he was the ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee. Curtis, who now lives in Clayton, is a trustee of Dartmouth, William Woods and Westminster colleges, and serves as chairman of the board of Lafayette Federal Savings and Loan.

Curtis is senior partner at the law firm of Curtis, Bamburg, Oetting, Brackman and Crossen, based in St. Louis.

Lincoln home, skillfully restored, now a multi-million dollar estate

How could President Abraham Lincoln afford a multimillion-dollar home?

He couldn't. But his now-famous residence in Springfield, Ill., has been the site of a $2.2 million restoration program just completed by the National Park Service.

Closed since May 1987 for renovation, the 1839-vintage home at Eighth and Jackson streets was officially reopened to the public today. It is the only home the 16th United States president ever owned.

NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE status was obtained for the two-story house long ago and it has become one of the leading tourist attractions operated under auspices of the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Reopening ceremonies were set for noon today, attended by William Penn Mott Jr., director of the National Park Service, Jack Dantone, captain of the U.S. Abraham Lincoln, Illinois Gov. Jim Thompson, Lt. Gov. George H. Ryan, Springfield Mayor Ossie Langfelder, and Don Castleberry, National Park Service Midwest regional director.

The Military Airlift Command Band from Scott Air Force Base performed before and after the ceremonies.

ALTON'S COLONIAL Fife and

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

Drum Corps marched and played music of past centuries this morning, and U.S. District Judge Richard Mills conducted naturalization proceedings for 150 new citizens. The Sangamon Bar Lawyers Chorus sang patriotic selections.

Today is the 101st anniversary of the law by which Illinois accepted the Lincoln home as a donation from Robert Todd Lincoln, the former president's oldest son.

Today also marks the 130th anniversary of Lincoln's "House Divided" speech, which was closely associated with his rise to national prominence.

TEN MILLION people have visited the home since it became a National Park area in 1972.

Castleberry, Thompson, U.S. Sen. Paul Simon and U.S. Rep. Richard Durbin have been credited with playing key roles in bringing about the restoration.

Goals include assuring the stability of the old structure and fulfilling the legislative mandate to preserve and interpret it for the benefit of current and future generations.

Furnishings present when the Lincoln family occupied the dwelling in 1844-1861 have been retained and restored.

ARCHAEOLOGISTS, historic architects and renovation experts were brought in to make sure that the work was done accurately.

The Springfield Convention and Visitors Bureau describes the effort just finished as "a massive renovation that is one of the most detailed and extensive historic restorations ever attempted in the United States."

Workers installed a climate-control system. They reinforced beams, replaced deteriorated wood and plaster, installed insulation, repaired and painted external siding, replaced the roof, improved several doors, refinished woodwork and placed new carpets and wallpaper.

MY FAMILY had a chance to tour the Lincoln home a few years ago, and I would recommend the visit to others.

The residence is open seven days a week throughout the year, and admission is free.

A four-block area surrounding the home, also administered by the National Park Service, also is worthy of a visit. It contains 17 other historic structures.

A NEW VISITOR CENTER costing $3.7 million was opened this month in Springfield, a half-block west of the Illinois Capitol. It was dedicated June 8 by Gov. Thompson and Secretary of State Jim Edgar.

It includes Illinois license plates, coal-mining lanterns, duck decoys, Indian pottery, information, parking room for 40 tour buses and 90 autos, and a picnic area.

The center also has large color photographs of Illinois landmarks, plus displays on wildlife, agriculture, politics, history and government.

LINCOLNFEST, not surprisingly, is the theme of Springfield's free Independence Day downtown street festival, set for July 2 and 3 this year.

He wasn't born in Illinois and didn't die here, but this state and its capital city have strong claims on the late president than does any other part of the world.

LincolnFest '88 entertainers will include Jan and Dean and their Beach Party, Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, Bachman Turner Overdrive and the Glenn Miller Orchestra.

EXACTLY 100 YEARS ago, construction of the Illinois State Capitol was completed.

The National Register of Historic Places has designated it as — what else? — a national historic place.

To note this honor, Secretary of State Edgar will participate in LincolnFest July 2 by unveiling a plaque on the building's east entrance. He also will bury a time capsule in the Capitol cornerstone.

Following these events, an ice cream social will be held on the Capitol lawn.

Also set for July 2 is a 9:30 a.m. parade.

EXTENDED TOURS of the State Capitol are planned Saturday evening, July 2. The public will be able to see rooms not usually shown on tours of the Statehouse.

Tour guides will wear 19th-century clothing on both July 2 and 3.

During the LincolnFest weekend, a new display inside the Capitol will chronicle its construction, history and recently completed restoration.

ROVING MUSICIANS, jugglers, dancers and costumed characters will be featured at LincolnFest along with arts and crafts exhibits, plus a Kids Area and Seniors Area.

It is the eighth year for LincolnFest. Rivaling it someday may be GrantFest, which in 1988 included events lasting from early May to early June. Adding to the interest in GrantFest will be its link to observance of the 100th anniversary of Granite City in 1996.

Metro Link could get railroad tracks by late June

By Roger McGrath
Staff affiliate

Agreements transferring existing railroad tracks to the Metro Link light-rail project could be finalized by late June, said Tom Purcell, chairman of the light-rail committee of the Bi-State Development Agency said.

"It could happen sooner," Purcell said.

The transfer of the railroad tracks from the Terminal Railroad and the Norfolk-Southern Railroad is one of the major hurdles Metro Link must clear before the federal government will commit to paying for the line's $287.7 million construction cost.

The other conditions are: "St. Louis County must agree to contribute $2 to Bi-State's operating budget for every $1 the City of St. Louis contributes."

•Bi-State must recognize Local 788 of the Amalgamated Transit Union as the union representing Metro Link employees.

"The agreements with the railroads are coming along," Purcell said. "We're working toward four to six weeks."

Directors of both railroads must approve the final terms of the agreements, he said.

The railroads will trade the existing right-of-way, including the Eads Bridge, to St. Louis for the city's MacArthur Bridge, just south of downtown.

The city, in turn, will transfer the track to Bi-State. The city will retain ownership of Eads' road deck, which may become a toll-free bridge, officials have said.

The Terminal Railroad's tracks are located downtown, and the Norfolk-Southern tracks run from Lambert-St. Louis International Airport into the city.

The 18-mile Metro Link will carry riders from East St. Louis to the airport.

If a full-funding contract obligating the federal government to pay Metro Link's construction cost is signed this summer, the light-rail line could begin operating in 1992, Bi-State officials have said.

Because a number of businesses along the tracks rely on rail shipments, Bi-State will have to operate a short-haul railroad. "You have to serve existing customers," Purcell said.

"It's always been part of the plan for that freight operation to exist," said Steve Willis, deputy general manager for Metro Link.

Several businesses along tracks parallel to South Sarah Avenue in the city now ship on what would become Metro Link track, as do about eight businesses along tracks by Page Avenue, he said.

Hill-Behan Lumber Co. probably is the biggest user of the track, Willis said.

Hill-Behan traffic manager Patrick Fundell said that during the spring-to-fall construction season, the lumber company might need shipments every day.

The short-haul service would operate between 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. "We're not operating light rail then," Willis said.

Moad swings right, homers for Triplets win

By Dave Whaley

Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — There was something wrong with John Moad's swing all spring. On Tuesday he swung right — literally.

The Triplets' first baseman already had three singles in the District 22 game against Troy when Post 708 brought in a left-handed pitcher. Granite City had just taken a 7-4 lead in the sixth inning and there were two on and no outs.

When the lefty came in, Moad — a left-handed batter since T-ball days — moved to the right side, coaxed the count to 3-1 and then jerked a fastball over the fence in left. That was all the insurance needed in a 10-6 Triplets victory.

My dad (first base coach Woody Moad) thought Moad was trying it," said Moad. "I'm a natural right-handed batter, but he wanted me to start hitting left-handed when I was young. I felt comfortable up there. I hit right-handed a lot in the batting cages."

The experiment paid off in a big way, prompting some joking that other players might switch sides.

"We'll let them do what they want if it's going to work out like that," said coach Tom Hennrich.

Illinois Grand Prix at GIR for weekend

Racing fans from Missouri and Illinois will have hometown drivers to cheer when the Valvoline/Machinists American Indy-Car Series rolls into the area this weekend for the Illinois Grand Prix.

Participants in the race will come from across the United States, but two of the series' top drivers are Kevin Whitesides of Columbia, Mo., and Bill Scott of Wheeling, Ill.

Those two and others will square off on neutral turf at Gateway International Raceway (formerly St. Louis International Raceway) on Illinois 203 just south of Madison.

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers and Valvoline Oil Co. are sponsors of the new American Indy-Car Series.

Whitesides and Scott could very well duel for the Valvoline Cup in the first Indy-car race ever held in this region — if they can keep up with Buddy Lazier, of Vail, Colo.

Lazier, a 20-year-old college student and star racer, diced with Whitesides for more than 80 miles before slipping away to a 29-second victory in the inaugural race of the series May 1 at Willow Springs International Raceway in Southern California. Lazier averaged 115.07 mph in the 100-mile race.

Hendrickson returns to town for Legion season

By Dave Whaley

Executive sports editor

The tall, lean figure on the bullpen mound down the left-field line at Varsity Field was throwing easily, just trying to keep his arm loose.

"Anything could happen tonight," he said. "I haven't pitched in a game since May 6."

As he remembered how it felt to get back on the mound and pitch competitively, many other memories came to mind. For this was Darin Hendrickson on Monday getting ready to pitch the season opener for the Tri-City American Legion Post 113 team.

The memories were mostly of the spring of 1987, when Hendrickson then a senior at Granite City High School — teamed with partner Scott LeVault to pitch the Warriors to within one game of the state tournament. The Warriors were 29-10, and Hendrickson and LeVault combined for a 17-7 record.

Hendrickson was 8-4 with a 2.38 earned run average. But the last image of Hendrickson was his pinpoint control. He struck out 48 his senior year and walked only nine. LeVault's stats were just as good (9-3, 2.79 ERA, 59 K's, 13 BB's) and together they, along with nine other seniors, almost led the Warriors to the state tournament.

"There's a lot of memories out on this field," Hendrickson said. "I look out there and still see Butch (Todd Hinterser) at third base, Jamie (Hogan) at second and all the others. I just wish we could play that last game over again."

That last game was a 7-2 loss

Darin Hendrickson

to Belleville East in the Granite City Sectional final on June 8, 1987. The game was close until the Lancers' Fred Judge blasted a grand slam off Hendrickson in the sixth inning to blow it open.

Hendrickson had another good summer for the Triplets (4-2, 2.10 ERA) before heading to Eastern Illinois University. But he didn't make the team.

"The coach there told me I would be better off going to a junior college," Hendrickson said. So he went to Lewis and Clark after a semester at EIU and pitched for Joe Silkwood and the Bucks. He was 3-7 with an ERA right around 4.00, but he lost five one-run games.

"Silkwood called before I left for Eastern and then I got in touch with him again when I didn't make the team there," Hendrickson said. "I learned a lot this year. I know I need to improve my work habits, lift weights and do more running."

"In high school, you have maybe a few exceptional hitters on a team. But everyone is tough in college."

To counter that, Hendrickson been working on the pitch made famous by Bruce Sutter and any pitcher who comes into contact with San Francisco Giant manager Roger Craig.

"Coach (Jack) Parker really helped me with the split-finger fastball last year," Hendrickson said. "I threw it for the first time in the Edwardsville Regional (when Hendrickson beat the Tigers 8-4) and it really made a difference."

"I know it's a tough pitch to hit, but it's tough to catch, too," said Joe Wallace, who caught Hendrickson in high school and is catching him again this summer. "I was having a hard time with it when we came out here to work out. Darin was throwing it good. It was falling off the table."

With a year of college ball under his belt, Hendrickson is expected to be the ace of the Triplets' staff this year. He could combine with John Moad, Tim Black, Mike Krausz, Mark Beggs and Wallace to give the team a competitive staff.

"It just feels good to come back here and pitch," Hendrickson said Monday. "I was a little nervous pitching tonight. I didn't know what to expect."

Hendrickson won the Legion season opener 18, allowing five hits in seven innings. He struck out four and walked two. Only one of the three runs he allowed was earned as his own throwing error led to two runs.

"I was satisfied with the year I had," Lewis and Clark was 24-34 overall," he said. "I hope I have a good summer and can go back and do better."

Meanwhile, memories of the spring of '87 will last forever.

If there's anyone out there who doubts the popularity of softball in the area, they should check out this year's schedule for the Metro-East Women's Fastpitch League.

The league, which started in 1987 with seven teams, has expanded to 15 teams and two divisions.

"We've worked year-round on this," said Helen Cherry of Cahokia, the league's president. "As soon as last season was over, we were getting ready for this year. We were hoping to double the size of the league, but we got even one more team than that."

The open-play division features Gillespie, Wood River, the Roadrunners, Smithton, Cahokia, the Rebels, the Silver Streaks (coached by Cherry and her husband, Paul), and the Eagles. Each team will play 20 games.

Teams in the 18-and-under division are O'Fallon, the Sting, Cahokia, the Firefighters, St. Jacob (composed of players from Triad High School), the Raiders, and Highland. Each team will play 18 games.

League play started June 1 and continues the first week of two August (depending on the number of rainouts). Most games will be played at the Cahokia American Post 784, but some games will be played at Southside Park in Belleville and Shell Park in Wood River.

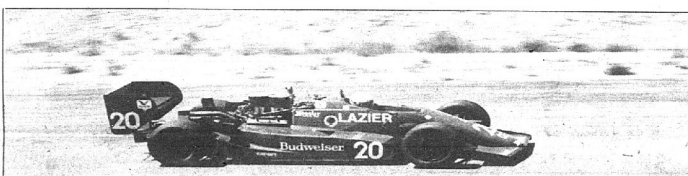

The league's treasurer is Tony Zolner of Granite City, who is also the Illinois Amateur Softball Association's 18-and-over commissioner. Zolner's wife, Norma, is secretary. Other league officials include Ralph Luggie (vice president and open-play scheduler), Eric Johannsen (18-and-under scheduler), and Fred Harth (publicity and fund raising).

"We have three main goals," Paul Cherry said. "The first is to get college scholarships for the girls. The second is to have the girls play in Illinois instead of going to St. Louis."

"The third is to have the college graduates help the younger players. One of the girls on our team is a junior in high school. Just being around those older players is a big help in learning how to mature as a ballplayer."

League games are scheduled for every day but Saturday. Most dates are doubleheaders, and the Metro-East Women's Fastpitch League will be played at Cahokia.

With approximately $700 needed to operate each team, it is vital for the league to have sponsors, and individuals and organizations making donations will be recognized on team uniforms and in the program. Persons interested in being sponsors should write to the Metro-East Women's Fastpitch League, 106 Tennessee, Granite City, Ill., 62040.

first 32 laps of the race. Whitesides lost the lead when the two lapped another car on a sharp uphill turn. Whitesides briefly bounced off the track but kept his car under control.

As the pass occurred, Scott ended his race-long tussle for third place with Bob Schader of Boulder, Colo., on the half-mile straightaway. Whitesides, 23, said the 40-mph winds that whipped Southern California's high desert on race day kept the race dusty and hampered the handling of his GAF Timberline March-Chevrolet.

"It was getting slick and I was getting tired," he said. "I just decided to lay back after the cautions got loose and not take any chances."

Wallace, Seets pick up hefty checks for wins

By Joe Senter

Correspondent

GRANITE CITY — Mike Wallace and John Seets picked up hefty paychecks with clean sweep wins at Tri-City Speedway Saturday.

Wallace won the special 40-lap feature in the U.M.P. late model stock car division on the 1/2-mile oval at Wallace, the brother of Winston Cup racer Rusty Wallace, started the event on the outside of the front row alongside rookie Bert Cheatham. Ray Guss Jr. and Bill Shaw were in the second row followed by Tom Helfrich and Charlie Sentman.

Wallace hit the first turn ahead of the pack. Kevin Gundaker and Helfrich got together in the third turn with Helfrich going up on the guardrail, knocking him out for the night. That brought out the only yellow flag of the race.

On the restart, Wallace took the lead and was ahead a half a lap and was lapping some of the slower cars by the midpoint of the race. The victory meant a $3,000 pay check. Guss was second and Gundaker finished third. But because of a weight rule, Gundaker relinquished third to Johnny Stokes. Cheatham was fourth. Wallace and Helfrich won the race with the Fastest Six event going to Cheatham followed by Wallace and Guss.

Seets made it a perfect night by winning his heat race, the Fastest Six event and the 40-lap main event in the super sportsman's cars. He wasted no time as he took the lead from Rick Bayer and both the checkered flag and the $1,000 winner's purse. Seets was followed by Bayer, Gary Archambault, Jalte Seets and Bob Brown. Archambault got third even after replacing his engine when he threw a connecting rod through the oil pan in the hot lap session.

Bayer and Brown followed John Seets in the Fastest Six event.

Seets also won the super sportsman's race at Godfrey Speedway on Friday. Marty Kopp won the street stock race and Bill Vinyard won the Bomber cars.

Gates open at Tri-City at 6 p.m. this Saturday, with the regular schedule of races at 8 p.m.

Senderling among field for AAA youth tourney

By Bill Hester

More than 200 participants are expected in the United States Tennis Association (USTA) High School Junior Tennis Tournament, which is held June 20-25 in Forest Park.

"We had 184 kids participate last year," said Tom O'Neal, president of the Triple A Youth Foundation, which is running the tourney for the second year in a row. "I felt that was super. It was one of the bigger tournaments around. The number of players actually exceeded my expectations. I thought there would be about 150."

The tournament, which is sponsored this year by the Suburban Journals, was started in 1980 by Frank Thompson, who founded the Triple A Youth Foundation. Due to health reasons, Thompson had to stop organizing the event after 1986.

But O'Neal filled the breach in 1987 and said he expects as many as 220 players to compete this year.

The tournament last year was held in August because the National Senior Olympics were being held in St. Louis in June," he said. "All of the courts in the area were being used by them. June is the best time for a tournament like this because it comes right after the high school season."

United States Tennis Association will feature championship and novice divisions for both boys and girls. The entry deadline is noon June 16.

The championship division will include two age brackets: 18s for players born on or after Oct. 1, 1969, and 16s for players born on or after Oct. 1, 1971. Cathy Senderling of Granite City will be competing in the girls 16s tournament.

The novice division is open to players born on or after Oct. 1, 1969, who will be high school students this fall. Unlike past years, the novice division will not be divided into two age groups.

"You hardly ever get novices in the 18 age group," O'Neal said. "This year we will just have (one category each) for high school boys and high school girls (in the) novice division."

Participants in the novice division must pay a $12 entry fee and cannot have played on a high school varsity team or ever been ranked in a USTA District. Championship level players pay a $15 entry fee and must

The Warrior baseball team had to settle for second place in the state tournament when it suffered a 3-1 loss to Maine West in the championship game. The game was played in 98-degree heat at Bradley University in Peoria. The Warriors managed only four hits as Ron Yates was pitched out first base to end the game. Granite City had beaten Streator 3-1 in the quarterfinals on June 6 and Lockport 6-4 in the semifinals the morning of the title game. They finished 24-3 as pitcher Charlie Papp finished the tournament most valuable player voting.

Claggett, Carter of Stars sign with 4-year colleges

By Dave Whaley
 Executive sports editor

GRANITE CITY — The Granite City Campus Stars may be no more, but there is little doubt there was some talent on the final basketball squad.

The Stars went 19-13 last winter, the best season in their five-year existence. And four members of that team have moved on to four-year colleges. Earlier, Don Stevanus signed with Eastern Montana and Darwin Montana signed with Lamar.

Now, Charles Claggett has signed a letter of intent to attend West Texas State and Robbie Carter will play at North Carolina-Wilmington.

Claggett's is a success story waiting to get even better. He was a member of Madison High School's 1981 state championship team and later attended Lewis and Clark Community College. But he dropped out after a year and went to work at a department store.

He was out of basketball for three years before returning to GOC last fall, partly because former Trojan teammate Corey Silas had played there. It didn't take Claggett long to regain his touch. He finished the year with a 17.9 scoring average, including 36 of 96 (37.5 percent) shooting from three-point range.

Included was a point rampage against State Community College on Dec. 12. That was a single point shy of Kirt Robinson's school record set in 1987. Claggett now heads to West Texas State in Canyon, Tex. The Buffaloes are an NCAA Division II school in the Lone Star Conference. Like any Texas gun-fighter, Claggett will be asked to come prepared to shoot.

"He has great three-point range and we'll be looking for him to shoot a lot," said Buffalo assistant coach Kelly Green, who did most of the recruiting work. "We had an All-American guard named Charles Bird who attempted more than 200 three-pointers last year. We hope this Charles can take his place."

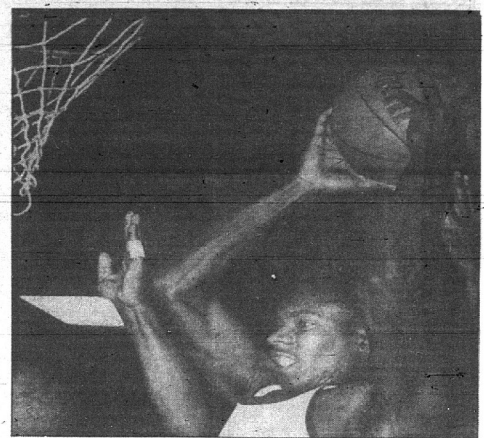

Bird was 5-11, but the 6-3 Claggett should have a better chance of getting his shot off more often over defenders, Green said.

"He can help us immediately," Green said. "We recruited another excellent guard, Rod Tolliver from Houston. He can also score, but he's more of a point guard. He and Charles should be able to team up well."

Claggett had a 3.0 grade point average at GOC last year, a significant figure in that he had been out of school for three years. "He really applied himself and did pretty well," said Stars coach Terry Collins. "He had an A, two B's and a C. His mother was just thrilled with his school work."

West Texas State, with an enrollment of 6,000, was 20-9 last year and reached the finals of the Lone Star Conference Tournament. They have eight returning players and five new ones coming in, so head coach Mark Adams and Green are full of hope.

"Charles is definitely the top shooter we have coming in,"

Charles Claggett

Robbie Carter

Green said. "We have lots of young players back, but we recruited people we think can be starters, too."

Carter is a 1986 graduate of East St. Louis Lincoln. He was a senior on the team that beat Granite City in the sectional finals (when LaPhonso Ellis was a sophomore). He came on strong at the end of last season and averaged 14.2 points and six rebounds for the Stars.

North Carolina-Wilmington (Michael Jordan's hometown) is a Division I school in the Colonial Athletic Conference. Other teams in the conference include Richmond, Navy, James Madison and George Mason — frequent participants in the NCAA Tournament. NC-Wilmington is coached by Robert McPherson.

SIUE offering swimming program

The introduction of the summer swim program has been announced by the Office of Campus Recreation at SIUE.

Students, faculty, staff and alumni are invited to register their children for swimming lessons in the new outdoor pool at Tower Lake Recreation Area. Four two-week sessions will be held. Most sessions are held Monday through Thursday. Children may be registered for any or all sessions. The fee per child per session is $10 for children of students and $15 for others.

Session I will begin June 20; Session II, July 5; Session III, July 19; and Session IV, Aug. 1. Children ages 3-12 may register for beginner through advanced classes. The ability level will be determined the first day of class. All classes are taught under Red Cross guidelines.

Classes for children ages 3-12 will meet daily at 10 a.m. Classes for children ages 3-7 will meet at 11 a.m.

Parents of infants are invited to introduce their babies to swimming in the Water Babies class. Starting an infant at a very young age has been shown to reduce the fear of water and develop strong swimming and safety skills early in life. Parents will be in the water with their infants at all times. The Water Babies class is open to babies up to three years of age. The class will meet at 11 a.m.

Registrations for the lessons will be taken in the Office of Campus Recreation, Room 1005 of the Vadalabene Center from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Registration is limited.

For further information, call the Office of Campus Recreation at 692-3984.

TONY SIMOKAITIS watches the action with another interested onlooker.

Fun — and hard work

Bat boy's job not always glamorous

By Pat Matreoli

Many young Cardinal fans might think it is a glamorous job retrieving bats and helmets from Vince Coleman, Ozzie Smith and the rest. But Tony Simokaitis knows there is much more to being a bat boy than simply rubbing elbows with superstars.

Simokaitis, 16, has been a Cardinal bat boy since 1985. A junior at St. Mary's High School, he said that while the job is not easy, he loves every minute of it.

"Everything about being a bat boy is fun," Simokaitis said. "Not many kids my age can say they get paid to watch every Cardinals game."

Simokaitis, who resides in south St. Louis, is one of the two bat boys employed by the Cardinals; the other is Tim Murin of Oakville, who is in his first year. Both earn an hourly wage and work about 40 hours a week when the team is in town. They do not travel with the club.

"The work is spread out enough so you don't get tired, especially when I'm still in school," Simokaitis said. "But it's a lot easier when they're in town on short home stands and then go on road trips."

The bat boys begin preparation for a night game around 3 p.m. or after school. They are responsible for wiping off the bench, putting out the bats for batting practice, filling coolers with Gatorade, polishing the batting helmets, and wiping down the catchers' gear before the players start arriving for batting practice.

During the game, they retrieve batting helmets and bats, provide umpires with baseballs and pick up foul balls.

"We generally change duties each game," Simokaitis said.

After the game, players' shoes must be polished. Unlike the old days when the patty polish had to be rubbed in and then buffed to a shine. Now, the liquid polish comes in bottle complete with applicator and the job gets done in short order, Simokaitis said. The bat boys generally leave the stadium about an hour after the game is completed.

Simokaitis got the job after writing to the Cardinals before the start of the 1985 season.

"I don't even remember what I said in the letter," he said. "I heard one of the bat boys was going away to college and I decided to give it a shot. And I got the job."

Simokaitis has been part of two pennant drives and two World Series.

"I think my first year was the most exciting because they won the championship," he said. "It was pretty nerve-wrecking. You could enjoy the games, but you were happier to see that the game was over and they won."

His efforts last season were rewarded with a 1987 National League championship ring, just like the players received.

"I was very surprised that I got one," Simokaitis said. "Not many kids can say they have one."

Simokaitis said his friends' requests for autographs and tickets have subsided since he first started.

"I don't usually get tickets anyway, and even less now that the Cardinals are drawing so well," he said.

Even when family and friends do attend the games, Simokaitis said it's not hard concentrating on the job at hand.

"I usually can't pick out the voices of anybody I know because with 40,000 people yelling, it's impossible," Simokaitis said.

For the young baseball fan, Simokaitis said his is the ultimate part-time job.

"I follow the game outside the Cardinals, and I did pretty much before I became the bat boy," Simokaitis said. "This is the perfect job for any kid who loves
